Rationers Empowered To Quiz Gas Card Holders

Drive to Prevent Nation-wide Control Is Pushed in Both Houses of Congress

The Office of Price Administration yesterday announced a new regulation empowering local rationing boards to call in holders of gasoline rationing cards for personal questioning to determine whether the card was obtained by fraud or mistake.

As for the future permanent rationing plan, Atlantic Seaboard motorists applying for supplemental gasoline rations must prove that they are members of car-sharing or pooling groups, the OPA said.

"It will not be sufficient for motorists applying for more than the basic ration merely to state that they transport other people to work," Joel Dean, chief, OPA Fuel Rationing Branch, asserted. "They will have to list the name and place of occupation for each person. In fact, the signature of each member of the car club will be required as part of the application. And the applicant will have to show that he has made every effort to form a club of at least four members, including himself."

May Order Cards Surrendered

He urged motorists who plan to use their cars for driving to work to begin forming the clubs at once to have their pooling arrangements completed when the new rationing plan takes effect. Should there be fewer than three persons, in addition to the driver, in the club, the applicant must state the specific reason.

Striking harder, boards also may require X cardholders to prove whether they are using their cards legitimately. Cards may be ordered surrendered if it is found that they were illegally obtained or irregularly used.

There are teeth in the regulation for the person who refuses to heed a board summons or refuses to surrender immediately a card at the board's order. Such a person's name will be recorded and he will be prohibited from obtaining any gasoline ration card, or book, under any OPA plan now effective or to be put in effect, it was threatened.

A decision of a local board may be reversed upon successful appeal to the OPA State director, it was said.

Action on Capitol Hill

On Capitol Hill, Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, yesterday filed a bill to block Nation-wide gasoline rationing until Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, holds public hearings.

Johnson's bill, exempting States where rationing was effective on June 1, would forbid any additional States being added to the list until the OPA held hearings in those

U. S. to Buy Scrap Rubber in Carload Lots at $25 a Ton

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones announced yesterday the Government would buy scrap rubber in carload lots anywhere in the United States at a flat price of $25 a ton.

Jones said the purchases would be made at "an increased price intended to provide small collectors throughout the country with a financial, as well as patriotic, incentive for putting forth greater effort in the collection of scrap rubber which is badly needed."

The purchase program will be handled by the Rubber Reserve Co., a Government corporation. It was formulated by this company, the War Production Board and Office of Price Administration.

The $25 price on carload lots will apply to "run-of-mine scrap and wornout tires."

Virginia Captive Of Japs to Return

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., June 4.—Joseph A. Billingsley, jr., of King George County, a prisoner of the Japanese since the day war broke out, will return to this country in an exchange of diplomatic captives.

The State Department notified young Billingsley's parents, Commonwealth's Attorney and Mrs. Joseph A. Billingsley of King George, that their son will leave Japan or Japanese occupied territory on or about June 14. Billingsley is believed still in Shanghai, where he was serving with the American consulate.

Removing Deferment Cause

(Service Pay Fight May Break Monday. Page 14.)

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The day of military service drew nearer for many draft-deferred married men yesterday when the Senate, on a voice vote, approved legislation authorizing financial aid for members of the armed forces in the enlisted grades.

The bill, which would pave the way for drafting some men now in 3-A by removing complete civilian dependency as a cause for deferment, was sent to the House as that chamber scheduled a similar measure for debate there next week.

The Senate bill, authored by Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, would make possible a monthly allotment of $50 to wives of men in the services. Of this amount, $28 would be paid by the Government and $22 would come from the pay of soldiers and sailors.

In addition, the bill would authorize Government payment of $12 monthly for one dependent child and $10 extra for each additional dependent child.

The House bill, on which a vote is expected next Tuesday, would allow dependent wives $40 a month, half to be paid by the Government and half to come from her husband's pay. Children of men in the service, under this measure, would receive $10 monthly.

Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat) of Massachusetts informed the House yesterday that the allowance bill would come up for debate there Monday and that he hoped for approval Tuesday.

The Senate bill would put dependents of service men into two classes, with a scale of allowances for each class. Wives and children of soldiers and sailors would be in Class A. In Class B would be parents and other family members.

Allowances for Class B dependents would run from $20 to $47 a month. For one parent, the allowance would be $37; for two parents, $47; for a parent and a brother or sister, $42; for one parent and two brothers or sisters, $47.

Under the Senate bill payments to Class A dependents would be compulsory, while allotments for Class B dependents would be optional.

In cases where men in the armed forces have dependents in both

E. M. Toland, Naval Inquiry Counsel, Dies

D. C. Attorney Won Distinction in NRA; Served in NLRB Quiz

Edmund M. Toland, general counsel of the Naval Affairs Investigating Committee of the House and prominent Washington attorney, died last night at his home, 4110 Warren Street Northwest, of a heart attack. He was 43 years old.

Mr. Toland had been at his office yesterday and had not complained of feeling ill. Soon after he returned to his home, he collapsed and died a few minutes later.

A native of Boston, Mass., Mr. Toland was graduated from Georgetown University in 1924 and was admitted to the District bar the same year. His rise to prominence came rapidly and during the days of the NRA he became a member of the arbitration board for the motion picture industry. For his effective diplomacy as an arbiter in settling a dispute between unions of the industry, the late Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, highly commended him and awarded him a Blue Eagle.

Served on NLRB Inquiry

Later Mr. Toland was appointed general counsel of the special House committee investigating the National Labor Relations Board, having been named by Chairman Howard Smith (Democrat), Virginia, who bitterly fought the Wagner Act when it was before Congress.

Since March, 1941, Mr. Toland has been serving as general counsel of the Naval Affairs Committee of the House and recently has been active in investigation of naval contracts.

Mr. Toland was a member of the National Press Club and University Club. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Leonora Sheehan Toland, and six young children, Margaret Mary, 10; Leonora Marie, 8; Edmund M., jr., 7; John Sheehan, 5; Francis, 2, and Mary, 1.

New Military Governor Arrives in Gibraltar

La Linea, Spain (Friday), June 5 (AP).—Gen. Mason McFarlane, the new military governor of Gibraltar, arrived at his post yesterday and took over his new duties, it was announced today.

General McFarlane, who formerly headed a British military mission in Moscow, was appointed last week.

Doughton Unit Has Showdown With Treasury

Committee Angered By Morgenthau Talk; Tax Issue Break Averted

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee, taking wrathful issue with alleged criticism by the Treasury, yesterday hauled Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., before the bar of its senior members.

In a two-hour showdown on "tax prerogatives," a serious break was averted and friendly relations apparently restored.

Morgenthau was "invited" to appear before the full committee following a stormy morning session in which members read the text of a Wednesday night broadcast by the Treasury Secretary.

Secretary Hastens to Capitol

Morgenthau had voiced the hope that the tax bill being written by the committee would not be "too little and too late" and in a conference with the press had alluded to the committee's two billion dollar revenue lag behind the Treasury's $8,700,000,000 tax goal.

The committee promptly adopted a resolution inviting him to appear at his earliest convenience to present any criticism he had of their measure.

The row, which threatened working relations with the Administration on the big war-financing bill, was smoothed over when Morgenthau hastened to the Capitol and conferred with seven ranking committeemen in Chairman Robert L. Doughton's office.

Doughton Issues Statement

When the conference broke up, Doughton released a statement that "there is every reason to believe that the same spirit of harmonious cooperation between Secretary Morgenthau and the Committee on Ways and Means will continue in the future as in the past."

"The opinion was unanimous that the committee and the Secretary had labored together for many years in a most harmonious manner in connection with the difficult fiscal affairs of the Government," read the statement.

"It was also agreed that the remarks made by Secretary Morgenthau in a recent radio address did not reflect and were intended in no way to reflect upon the Committee on Ways and Means or its procedure in writing the pending tax bill."

First Dusk-to-Dawn Rehearsal

D. C. to Join Virginia, June 17, In All-Night Test Blackout

The District of Columbia will join Virginia in a dusk-to-dawn blackout on the night of June 17, it was announced yesterday by Defense Coordinator John Russell Young. It will be the District's first all-night blackout rehearsal.

Although details have not yet been worked out, indications last night were that the part of metropolitan Washington in Maryland would not participate, unless the suburban counties decided for themselves to come along just to be neighborly.

The Richmond-devised plans for the blackout, which will be followed here, provide that street and all exterior lights must be extinguished throughout the night, and interior lights must be so screened as to prevent their being visible from the outside.

Except for a period of unspecified length during the night, when an air-raid test alarm is sounded, motor vehicles will be permitted to move with dimmed lights and pedestrians may come and go.

But when the raid alarm is sounded, traffic must stop, vehicles must extinguish their lights and people on the streets must take shelter. Air-raid wardens and auxiliary police and firemen will go

3 More U. S. Ships Sunk; Probe Asked

Preliminary Inquiry Under Way; Ellender Says Naval Officers May Be Summoned

By the Associated Press

Intensified Axis submarine warfare in the Atlantic has prompted a Senate Naval Affairs Subcommittee to make a preliminary investigation of the Navy's submarine campaign.

With the loss of six more Allied vessels from enemy action—two of them American merchant ships and one a small patrol boat—officially announced by the Navy yesterday—Committee Chairman Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana indicated that naval officers might be called for a public hearing.

"If we are not entirely satisfied that everything possible is being done to halt these sinkings, we are going into the whole matter in a public hearing," Ellender said.

United Nations shipping losses in the Atlantic rose to an announced 17 in the last five days and the total lost off the North and South American coasts reached 245 since Pearl Harbor.

Crewmen Machinegunned

Two United States merchant vessels, one medium-sized and the other small, whose sinking was announced yesterday, were torpedoed in the Caribbean area. Survivors from one of them reported that gunners on an Axis submarine turned a deadly spray of bullets upon crewmen abandoning ship, killing three ship's officers and one seaman. Seventeen other members of the crew were rescued. Eight others on a raft had not been reported.

The entire crew of 35 survived the other Caribbean sinking.

The U. S. S. Cythera, a 602-ton former private yacht on patrol in the Atlantic area, was three weeks overdue and presumably lost.

Sub Captained by Italian

Key West, Fla., June 4 (AP).—A German submarine commanded by an Italian officer torpedoed a British merchantman in the Caribbean near Cuba May 27, killing four men, survivors said.

After the attack, announced by the Navy today, the submarine surfaced and its commander talked with men in four lifeboats.

"That captain was Italian," said Capt. Alexander Pope. "He talked fairly good English with a decided Italian accent. The rest of the crew appeared to be German and the submarine was of German design and make. It had a swordfish painted on the conning tower."

Thirty-two Chinese were in the torpedoed vessel's crew of 85.

More Czechs Slain as Nazi Axman Dies

Gestapo Slaughters 187 in Reprisal For Assassination of Reinhard Heydrich

By J. Wes Gallagher,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 4.—Reinhard Heydrich, scourge of Nazi-occupied Europe, died in Prague today while the rifles of his Gestapo took terrible revenge among the populace for his assassination, and tonight the German government prepared to bury him with all the macabre pomp accorded a Chicago gangster of the twenties.

Twenty-four more Czechs, including three women, were executed in Prague and Brunn today following the announcement of Heydrich's death, the Prague radio announced.

But the bloody terror loosed by henchmen of Hitler's hangman, which already has claimed the lives of 187 hostages in Bohemia and Moravia, was building up its own counter terror. The German radio itself revealed that Nazis in the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia were feeling the hand that strikes by night; the revenge of patriot-assassins who come by parachute from abroad to repay, with bomb, fire and steel, for the subjugation of their homeland.

British Weapons Used, Nazis Say

Indeed, a Nazi broadcast this evening, giving what purported to be the details of Heydrich's fatal wounding, said an automatic pistol and an antitank bomb used by the two assassins were of British make and that the same kind of automatic pistol had been found in the possession "of some parachute agents who had been dropped by British planes over the protectorate."

It was the bomb, the broadcast said, which got "der henker"—the hangman—while he was riding beside his chauffeur on a steep hairpin curve a week ago.

Whatever the truth of these details, the British government long ago promised post-war punishment for this "bloodiest of all the bloody Nazis." The 38-year-old Heydrich headed the list of those on whom the British plan to exact retribution for Nazi terrorism in the occupied countries.

The hundreds of Czechs who have died, or who probably faced death tonight because of the assassination, will be merely additions to a vast roll begun in 1941 when Hitler sent "The Hangman" as Reichsprotector for Bohemia and Moravia to Prague to "quiet unrest."

Hundreds of executioners' rifles produced a "quiet" but failed to

Vega's Plant 6 Months Ahead Of Flying Fortress Schedule

By the Associated Press

Burbank, Calif., June 4.—Boeing flying fortresses, those four-motored, wide-ranging bombers which have proved their deadly efficiency on many a fighting front, are rolling off the Vega Aircraft Corp.'s assembly line, six months ahead of schedule.

President Courtland S. Gross disclosed today that the young Vega organization, where initial tooling was started less than a year ago, is the first plant to start deliveries under a pooled facilities plan, designed to speed production of the giant bombers for the United States Army air forces.

Gross announced a full production schedule for the B-17—official designation of the fortress—without slowing the output of Vega Ventura twin-engine bombers for the British.

"In fact, the men are well ahead of schedule on the Ventura bombers," he declared.

Under the production pooling plan, which President Roosevelt insisted upon, Vega and Douglas, as well as Boeing, are manufacturing the B-17. One hundred Vega engineers spent several weeks at the Boeing plant last fall, obtaining engineering data on the craft.

"Now," said Gross, "the fortresses are being manufactured completely by Vega and its parts subcontractor, with the exception of such purchased parts as engines, instruments, propellers and tires."

Gross made public a telegram from Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the U. S. Army Air Forces.

"Congratulations on your splendid record of being six months ahead of schedule. This accomplishment is the result of your untiring efforts in following through on an outstanding case of long-range planning. Upon you depends how soon victory will be ours."

Dunkerque Anniversary Party

U. S. Reporter Dodges Bullets As Sand Grips Commando Craft

The following eye-witness account of the Commando raid today on the Boulogne-Le Touquet area was written by a Christian Science Monitor correspondent, R. Maillard Stead, who was chosen by lot from among American correspondents in London to accompany the raiders. He was the first United States writer to go with the Commandos.)

By R. Maillard Stead,
(Representing the American Correspondents in London.)

With the British Commandos Off Northern France, June 4 (AP).—The shape of far more fearsome things to come loomed up before the startled Nazi sentries on the French coast early this morning when I saw some of Britain's commandos wade silently through breast-high surf between Boulogne and Le Touquet, shoot up German strong points, and depart safely with useful information and very slight casualties.

This was a significant commemoration of the second anniversary of completing the evacuation from Dunkerque, for though a small raid, it was one more promise that the defense era was ending for the United Nations in western Europe, and the Nazis were about to be called on in a big way to show whether they can take what they have been so ready to hand out.

In the latest illustration of combined land, sea and air operations directed by Lord Mountbatten—now conferring with American service chiefs in Washington—the commandos were led into action by 29-year-old Maj. K. R. S. Trevor, a nephew of T. W. Trevor, a retired British barrister residing in Charlottesville, Va.

The reconnaissance was a limited one, but was carried out with an audacity that underlined the potentialities of this type of warfare in relation to American-British plans for a continental offensive.

The craft in which I was crouching after the withdrawal of the commandos started became tempo-

R. A. F. Stops Dive Bombers In Africa

Seven Are Shot Down As Nazis Hurl Precious Reserve Craft Into Fray

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, June 4.—The Germans were throwing their carefully conserved dive-bombers into the Battle of Libya today in an effort to break a deadlock aground by wiping out Allied strongholders around Bir Hacheim, southern anchor of the British desert line.

But, according to today's R. A. F. communique, the Stukas found more than their match in British fighting planes. Seven of the Junkers divers were reported shot down, along with an escorting Messerschmitt, in a single interception and dog-fight yesterday near Bir Hacheim.

After nine days of top-speed fighting in which tanks criss-crossed the sun-scorched terrain of Cirenaica in penetrations and flank attacks resembling naval maneuvers, the Allied and Axis land forces halted operations today to rest, repair equipment and prepare for new onslaughts.

Foe Driven Out of Tamar

There was virtually no land fighting. Choking dust clouds cut visibility to zero in some places and tankmen who took the field reported that temperatures in their turrets ranged up to 130 degrees.

One of the latest important actions occurred Tuesday at twilight when British armored forces drove the enemy out of Tamar, a strongpoint six miles west of Knightsbridge, a cross-roads standing squarely in front of the nine-to-10-mile gap which the Germans had cut in the Allies' Ain El Gazala-Bir Hacheim line.

"The enemy is known to have lost at least 14 tanks in this engagement," said today's G. H. Q. communique.

200 Bombers Batter Bremen; Landing Gains 'Invasion' Data

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 4.—Britain threw her three fighting services against the Nazi continent today in 24 hours of ceaseless assault which clearly were meant to pave the way for the great attacking force to come.

While a force of perhaps 200 big bombers battered Bremen in the brief summer darkness, commandos supported by the Royal Navy landed in the very heart of the invasion coast, between Boulogne and the once-gay gambling resort of Le Touquet.

The commandos brought back valuable information for evaluation by Allied Generals here, at a time when far-reaching plans for the future Allied offensive were being discussed in Washington. The commandos' own chief, Lord Louis Mountbatten, now is in Washington.

A British naval escort vessel sank a German patrol vessel and damaged a second enemy vessel in the commando raid, it was announced tonight.

Today, in the wake of the commandos, fighters and light bombers swarmed across the Channel to attack targets in the Pas de Calais region; the Kentish sky was filled this evening with wave after wave of returning squadrons, and a heavy rumble of explosions rolled across the water from the direction of Boulogne and Calais.

R. A. F. fighters in their afternoon attack ranged from Mardyck on the north to Le Touquet and St. Omer on the south. Without opposition in their attack on Boulogne, American-made Boston bombers left columns of black smoke rising from the docks. All the bombers came safely home.

U. S. Sub Sinks Jap Troopship; 12,000 Men Believed Aboard

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, June 4.—An Allied submarine, presumably American, was credited officially tonight with the destruction or damaging of four enemy ships totaling 29,000 tons—one of them an overloaded troopship which went down with at least 12,000 Japanese soldiers.

An armed transport of 6000 tons, one jammed supply ship of 10,000 tons and one of 6000 tons were torpedoed and sunk, and a 7000-ton supply ship was badly damaged.

Implying that the better part of a division may have perished aboard the transport, Allied headquarters said all aboard probably were lost and added: "The Japanese are notorious for overloading troop transports. It is known that they put more than 12,000 soldiers on some 6000-ton ships."

It was indicated that the submarine had made its raid well beyond Australian waters, somewhere on the seas between Japan's numerous southwest Pacific bases.

It was the first official announcement of Allied Naval success in the southwest Pacific area since May 22,

Diversion Move

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Japanese planes attacked the key Pacific outpost on Midway Island yesterday as the Navy reported "all quiet" at its Dutch Harbor base in the Aleutian Islands.

The assault came at 9 a. m. Midway time (2:30 p. m. E. W. T.), a late Navy communique disclosed. The terse announcement gave no details beyond the fact and time of the raid.

However, from information at hand it seems clear that at least one and probably two Japanese naval forces are operating in the mid-Pacific.

Coast Radio Stations Silenced

[All Pacific Coast radio stations went off the air last night in accordance with a precautionary order issued by the Western Defense Command and Fourth Army. Stations from Canada to Mexico were affected.—Editor's Note.]

The early Navy communique declared that the planes which attacked Dutch Harbor were probably carrier-based, and officials believe that the attack on Midway also was launched from a carrier task force.

The distances are too great for one carrier force to be involved—it is more than 1600 miles between Midway and the Aleutian base. And, while it would be possible for land-based aircraft to attack Midway from Japanese-held Wake Island, more than 1000 miles away—this is not likely, Navy men declare.

From the number of planes involved in the attack on Dutch Harbor—four bombers and 15 fighters—it is probable that their mother ship was a small carrier, or perhaps a small carrier and a seaplane tender. Therefore, it may be retreating toward home, with its protecting cruisers and destroyers.

Raids "Not the Last"

On the other land, naval observers say, the task force may be heading toward another objective—in Alaska or on the West Coast of the United States.

In this connection, Secretary of War Stimson recalled at his press conference yesterday that he warned

Air Officer Named To High Army Job

Air power received increased recognition in the Army high command yesterday with the assignment of Brig. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, a veteran pilot, as assistant Chief of Staff in charge of organization and training of the entire Army.

Other transfers announced by Secretary Stimson detail Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, former war plans chief, as chief of military intelligence, and Maj. Gen. Harold R. Bull as chief of the Replacement and School Command. R. W. Ireland, former United Air Lines traffic manager, becomes chief of the air division of the Army Transportation Service.

U. S. Generals Hear Plea for Aid in China

War Sidelights

Allied Convoy Reaches Port Of Archangel

London, June 5 (Friday) (INS).—The first British and American convoy since last fall has arrived at Archangel, northern Russian port, with the breaking of the ice pack, the Daily Mail reported early today from Stockholm.

This means that considerable pressure will be lifted from Murmansk, it was stated. Murmansk was the sole ice-free northern Soviet port during the winter.

The Subway Peril

Halifax, Nova Scotia, June 4 (AP).—Allan Harvie of the British merchant navy, has more lives than a cat—but he's a cinch for the minor maladies of man.

Rescued after his tenth torpedoing, Harvie is hospitalized here—with a sore throat. He got it in a New York subway last week when he went down to see the sights.

Grady Reports on India

New Delhi, June 4 (INS).—The ministry of supply tonight made public the official summary compiled by Henry Grady, head of the United States economic mission to India, who has been investigating the possibilities of making India the United Nations arsenal of the Far East.

The Grady report urged that mass production methods be adopted to achieve this end.

Simultaneous with the release of Grady's report, however, the ministry of supply issued a white paper listing the difficulties of carrying out Grady's recommendations, particularly from the standpoint of adapting the American system of industrial regimentation for war production to the Indian sphere.

Explosion in Paris

London, June 4 (INS).—An explosion occurred tonight in the Paris headquarters of the Volunteer Legion for the Russian Front, the Exchange (British) Telegraph Co. reported, quoting the Paris radio.

The legion has been enlisting volunteers to serve with the German army in the east.

Nazi Munitions Destroyed

New York, June 4 (INS).—A strong German detachment guarding an ammunition dump near Hazebrouk, in occupied France, was attacked today and the ammunition dump blown up, the British radio reported in a broadcast heard by C. B. S.

No further details were given.

It was not thought likely that the commandos assault on Boulogne had any connection with this attack, since Hazebrouk is well inland from the Boulogne-Le Touquet area.

tarily stranded on one of the tricky sandbanks which the rest of the assault party avoided.

Picked out by dazzling searchlights, we remained stationary long enough for Nazi gunners to get the range and give us a sensational series of narrow escapes.

Glittering tracer bullets converged overhead, water splashed from near misses, but nobody was seriously hurt and we floated off again and resumed the homeward journey.

The brief raid showed, in the words of one veteran commando officer, aged 23, that "Jerry has got the jitters."

The commandos carried out a high-pressure investigation of everything within reach.

The Germans frequently fired at each other in general confusion. This went on about an hour and before the time came to withdraw.

R. A. F. planes roaring overhead created a diversion on the right flank.

Naval escorts present but undetected by the Germans caused a diversion of their own in an engagement with a couple of Nazi patrol vessels.

When the first pearly slashes of dawn appeared in the sky the British ships were not out of sight of the German-occupied shore. But R. A. F. fighters and naval escorts deterred the Nazis from anything like a sustained attack. After breakfast the commandos were discussing, as their higher officers will later, the lessons learned in even the smallest raid of these combined interservice lines.

Major Trevor's uncle in Charlottesville, who is also the father of another commando commander, Col. T. H. Trevor, yesterday said he was extremely glad to hear that his nephew had led the successful raid, but was not at all surprised.

"The commandos have a very difficult job," he said, "and they are doing it well. Of course, they are picked men and very brave men. Both my nephew and my son are regular army officers. Major Trevor went to Sandhurst and then into the Cheshire regiment.

"Recently I had a letter from his father, but nothing, of course, about the commandos—because their work is all secret and you don't hear about it until after it's over.

"Nearly all of them are fairly young men—my son is only 30—and it's very nice to know when they've come back from a raid safely. Of course, it's their job, they're trained for it."

3 Officers Reach Chungking for War Parley With Chiang

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, June 4.—The ranking United States commanders in southeast Asia gathered here tonight for war conferences with China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek against a background of press appeals for the United States to take the initiative in an immediate land, sea and air offensive against Japan.

Interest in the meeting was heightened by Chinese reports of new Japanese troops concentrations in Manchukuo, and the spread of speculation that the Japanese generals may have decided at last to try the strength of Russia's armies in Siberia.

Chinese circles said such a move would account for Japan's failure to follow up her early successes by attempting invasion of Australia or India.

There was no immediate announcement of the subjects discussed by Chiang and the Americans, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell and Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, who flew here from India, and Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, who came from Kunming.

Stilwell on Hand

Stilwell is Chiang's American chief of staff, the Commander of the Chinese Fifth and Sixth Armies, who escaped Japanese entrapment in Burma, reached India in a hazardous overland trek and said bluntly that "we took a Hell of a beating." Brereton is the commander of United States Army Air Forces in action from Indian bases, and Chennault commands the Flying Tigers, American Volunteer Group with the Chinese air force, soon to be incorporated in the United States Army.

The influential Chungking newspaper, Ta Kung Pao, urged in an editorial that the United States assume greater responsibility for conduct of the war, and said "the Allies should launch attacks against Japan by land, sea and air in collaboration with China's war effort."

Although hard pressed on fronts raging from the southeast coast to the mountainous Burma Border, Chiang's fighting forces were reported holding grimly and in some places lashing out on their own.

A Chinese communique on the fight for the Walled City of Chuhsien in western Chekiang Province said the Japanese lost 2000 men in a single day of repeated attacks against the point-blank fire of Chinese artillery.

At stake is control of a Chinese-held central section of the Hangchow-Nanchang railroad and one of the closest air base areas from which planes could be sent against Japan.

Japs 3 Miles Away

The Japanese, only three miles from the northern limits of the city, were attempting to close in from three sides, but the Chinese high command said defense forces were counterattacking in some places

To the west, the Chinese were reported holding back enemy columns attempting to strike into Chekiang Province from Nanchang. Japanese spearheads thrust north from the Canton area in Kwangtung Province also were reported meeting stiff resistance.

There was no new word from the Hupeh Province front along the Yangtze where the Chinese have been fighting their way close to the important river ports of Ichang and Shasi.

From Yunnan Province, bordering Burma, Chinese dispatches said fighting still centered around Lungling and Tengyueh, just west of the upper Salween River.

The high command announced that Kengtung, capital of one of the Shan states of northern Burma, had been lost to the Japanese more than a week ago.

night said that three British fighters were lost in the day to one German fighter. The Cherbourg area, including the Maupertus Air Field, was attacked in the morning, docks at Boulogne were bombed in the afternoon sweep over the Pas de Calais Zone, and tonight the Dunkerque docks were attacked.

British naval units escorting the commandos, which engaged the two German patrol boats, suffered neither casualties nor damage to their ships, a combined operations headquarters communique said tonight.

At Bremen, where the attack was concentrated within half an hour, a particularly large fire was left in the dock area and additional fires were set in the industrial part of the city.

The attack on Bremen, although small in comparison with the four-figure "victory raids" on Cologne and Essen, was called "extremely successful" by an air force informant. He said the raiders did proportionately as much damage to the crowded North Sea center for Nazi submarine, destroyer and aircraft manufacture as did the larger Ruhr attacks.

The city was brightly lit by flares and heavily and methodically bombed. British and enemy accounts agreed on loss of ten British planes. The Germans said fire bombs were mainly used.

Bremen, normally a city of 325,000, on the banks of the Weser, is second only to Hamburg as a German maritime center. It is only a 300-mile flight from England.

The docks at Dieppe, France, and a number of enemy airdromes also were attacked overnight.

Counting these latest assaults, the R. A. F. had used more than 3000 bombing aircraft alone against Germany since Saturday.

Persistent use of commandos and fast, light bombers against Nazi-occupied northern France is of obvious significance in these days of invasion planning.

This was the second commando stab into the Boulogne area in six weeks and the R. A. F. has battered the region daily.

Only 25 miles from England, the Boulogne-Le Touquet coast is the doorstep to the valleys of the Seine and Somme.

Today the commandos pierced the German "crust" defenses with only light casualties. Official accounts did not report the presence of any of the German armored formations on which the defense of this invasion coast once depended; indeed, there have been many reports that these panzer units have been sent to the Russian front.

Local Fighting Resumed on Russian Front

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Friday) June 5.—The Soviet command reported early today a resumption of fighting and air force activity on some sectors of the front. Actions afield were described as local, however, and there still was no indication of general fighting.

"During June 4," said the communique, "engagements of local importance were fought in some sectors of the front, with active air operations.

"During June 3 units of our air force on various sectors of the front destroyed or damaged 115 motor vehicles with troops and war materials, 40 carts with ammunition, mine fields and antiaircraft guns, eight antiaircraft machine gun posts and four searchlights, blew up four ammunition dumps, damaged two railway stations and dispersed and partly annihilated up to six companies of enemy infantry."

The midday communique yesterday said 300 Germans were killed on the central front in a local Nazi attack and that 12 more German planes had been shot down on the same front.

U. S. Sub Sinks Jap Troopship

when a Japanese cruiser and two cargo vessels were reported sunk by Allied undersea action.

Allied bombers rained explosives on the Japanese-held airdrome at Koepang, Timor, today, and the docks at Rabaul, New Britain, General MacArthur's headquarters announced.

Direct hits were scored on both target areas, fires were started, and antiaircraft installations were destroyed, the communique said.

A Japanese seaplane found afloat near Tulagi in the Solomon Island group also was machine-gunned by Allied reconnaissance airmen.

Communiques from Allied headquarters disclosed that each of two Japanese submarines had attacked small cargo vessels 35 miles east of Sydney and 225 miles south of that populous east coast city respectively, and that one of the three was sunk. The other two escaped undamaged.

However, Prime Minister John Curtin told the Australian parliament at Canberra that all four of the midget Japanese submarines which entered Sydney harbor last Sunday had been destroyed, and that only one of these had been able to discharge its torpedoes.

A converted naval depot ship was sunk in that attack.

Jap Midget U-Boat Is Raised at Sydney

Sydney, Australia, June 4 (AP).—One of the small Japanese submarines which unsuccessfully attacked Sydney Harbor Sunday was raised partly today, and a naval officer said it was larger than the two-man midgets which were used in the Pearl Harbor raid of December 7.

(Japan's first class submarines are divided into four groups ranging from 250 to 365 feet, as listed in Jane's fighting ships. The two-man type discovered at Pearl Harbor had a 5-ft. beam, a cruising radius of approximately 200 miles at low speed after being launched from a mother ship, and carried two 18-in. torpedoes as compared with the 21-in. standard used in the United States Navy.)

Hitler Flies to Finland to Greet Mannerheim on His Birthday

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, June 4.—Adolf Hitler flew to Finland from Germany today to deliver personally birthday greetings to Field Marshal Baron Gustaf Mannerheim, and he returned to Germany by air tonight.

Hitler was accompanied both ways by Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, the chief of his high command.

Mannerheim was presented a golden grand cross of the German Eagle Order by Hitler.

The Finnish radio in an official broadcast from Helsinki told in detail of the celebrations in honor of Mannerheim, but did not mention Hitler.

"At a luncheon in honor of the marshal," said the broadcast, "President Ryti addressed the marshal in a speech summing up his life and achievements."

It was indicated the luncheon was in Helsinki. Although both Mannerheim and Ryti were listed as present, neither Marshal Keitel nor any other German was mentioned.

President Ryti conferred on Mannerheim the title of Marshal of Finland in recognition of "unique services rendered during three wars and in time of peace," the Helsinki radio said.

The Berlin radio in a Helsinki dispatch telling of the Hitler-Mannerheim meeting said it took place "on Finnish soil behind the lines."

Baron Mannerheim, celebrating his seventy-fifth birthday, was quoted as "expressing the hope that this year might see the end of Bolshevist barbarism." Hitler, the radio said, "had lengthy conversations" with Marshal Mannerheim, President Risto Ryti and Marshal Keitel which "were held in an extremely friendly atmosphere."

The visit, the radio said, "sprang a great surprise amongst the Finnish people, and only Marshal Mannerheim and President Ryti had been informed of the Fuehrer's visit on the eve of the birthday."

White Shirt Chief Convicted of Sedition; Jap Agents to Be Sentenced Here Today

George W. Christians—the first American tried since Pearl Harbor for aiding the enemy—was convicted by a Chattanooga, Tenn., jury late yesterday on four charges of sedition.

Christians, White Shirt commander and agent of the revolutionist "Socis," will be sentenced Monday by Federal Judge Leslie Darr. He is liable to 80 years in prison and $40,000 fine.

Meanwhile, in Washington, four Japanese agents will be sentenced by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in the District Court today. They are:

Ralph Townsend, a former college professor who brought back strong Japanese sympathies from his several years consular service in the Far East. After he visited Tokyo in 1937, propaganda began to hum on the West Coast. Townsend worked closely with Jikyoku Inikai, the "trade" organization which purveyed propaganda on the orders and the money of the Mikado's foreign office. After this organization folded up, Townsend transferred his operation to the Scribner's Commentator organization at Lake Geneva, Wis. Townsend pleaded guilty, in open court, to, violating the Foreign Agent Act, as an agent of Japan.

Frederick Vincent Williams and David Warren Ryder, who were convicted by a jury Monday of conspiring with Townsend and five Japanese to spread the Mikado's propaganda that "America has no enemies in Asia." They were found guilty, also, of violating the agents act.

Tsutomu Obana, one of the Japanese conspirators, a stooge who was left behind when the four big shots went back to Tokyo. He pleaded guilty.

The verdict against Christians came after a four-day trial in which United States Attorney J. B. Frazier, jr., placed in evidence the inflammatory threats and warnings the 59-year-old seditionist sent to soldiers and officials.

Christians outlined a method for picking off officials when the revolution came, as predicted by him and the "Socis." "Your position makes you vulnerable," he wrote to a Selective Service officer.

"Are we fighting to make Roosevelt dictator of the world?" he said in a pamphlet sent to soldiers.

His jurors urged the court to show him mercy.

Dubuque, Iowa, June 4 (AP).—Indictment of Peter H. McCarthy, 72, member of a prominent Dubuque lumber family, on charges of sending "libelous, defamatory" remarks about President Roosevelt through the mails, was announced here today by Lee McNeeley, clerk of the United States District Court.

McNeeley said the charge is based on typewritten postcards allegedly mailed here last April 4 and addressed to Senators Tom Connally of Texas, Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee and Harry F. Byrd of Virginia.

The postcard messages, according to the indictment, commended the Senators for a "grand fight against strikes in industry" and demanded impeachment of the President.

Brig. Gen. Edwards Made Assistant Chief of U. S. Staff

By Edward E. Bomar
Associated Press Staff Writer

Air power received new recognition in the top councils of the War Department yesterday as a 47-year-old veteran pilot was named assistant chief of staff in charge of organization and training for the entire Army.

Appointment of Brig. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards to this position was announced by Secretary of War Stimson, who noted that the deputy chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, likewise was an airman.

Already air force officers comprise fully half of the General Staff of approximately 100 members as a result of the War Department's recent reorganization, and military circles look for an airman to be assigned soon to another of the four posts of assistant chief.

Another General Staff shift brought the recall from field service of Maj. Gen. George V. Strong to head the military intelligence branch as an Assistant Chief of Staff. He is a former chief of the war plans division.

In another military air development, Stimson announced the appointment of R. W. Ireland, former traffic manager of United Air Lines, to be chief of the air division of the Army transportation service. The War Department said this was part of an increasing effort to utilize aircraft to "speed the flow of man power and materials into all phases of the war effort."

Ireland will administer priorities for both cargo and passengers on domestic and overseas commercial air routes, and also the Army ferrying command. Capt. Leigh Parker, who has been vice president of Delta Air Lines, was named his assistant.

General Edwards, as new chief of the General Staff's "G-3" division, succeeds Maj. Gen. Harold R. Bull, who was transferred to head the replacement and school command of the Army ground forces at Birmingham, Ala.

General Strong succeeds Brig. Gen. Raymond E. Lee, whose new assignment was undisclosed.

'Few Called'

100,000 Seek Commissions In WAAC

Doors of recruiting stations were closed last night to candidates for officers' jobs with the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, with more than 100,000 application blanks given out.

Between 2300 and 2400 women made application through the District of Columbia station, although there was no way to determine how many of these would finish the job by sending the filled-in blanks to Baltimore.

Since only 450 commissions will be granted for all nine Army corps areas, the biggest part of recruiting has just now begun.

Applicants who show from information on their blanks and from their physical examination records that they are eligible material for the officers' training school, to open at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, about July 15, will be notified to report to their corps area headquarters for tests and interviews.

The War Department is now making appointments to 18 women who will assist with the interviews, two in each corps area. Nine of these women will later come to Washington to be part of the "final board of review" making selections.

According to announced plans, women making highest showing at the school will be given the highest ranks. However, a conscious effort will be made to have all ages and "qualifications" represented on a ratio basis. It is not intended, for instance, that all officers be college graduates.

Since an unexpected number of women applied for blanks, the War Department yesterday revised its plans for physical examinations of all applicants.

Officials in each of the corps areas will select only 500 women of "highest mental alertness ratings" to receive the physical examination. If all were given the examination, it was explained, the office of the surgeon general would be "greatly overtaxed."

Gros and Wife Found Guilty Of Espionage

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 4.—Dr. Hans Helmut Gros and his attractive wife, Frances, today were convicted on Federal espionage charges.

Both were convicted of conspiring to transmit national defense information to Germany and Gros was found guilty on the additional charge of failing to register with the State Department as a foreign agent.

They face a possible maximum sentence of 20 years in prison each on the first charge. Gros is liable to a possible five years more on the second.

Federal Judge Ben Harrison, who heard the case without a jury, denied motions for dismissal, and, pronouncing the couple guilty, said:

"I am satisfied beyond any doubt that Mr. Gros was acting as an agent of the German government, and that Mrs. Gros knew that before she married him. She married him knowing that and continued to assist him in his activities."

Nelson, Lyttelton Reportedly Pick Invasoin Hour

By International News Service

The "zero" hour of a European invasion was tentatively chosen last night by WPB Chief Donald Nelson and Britain's Minister of Production Oliver Lyttelton.

At the conclusion of almost uninterrupted day and night production parleys during the last 48 hours, the two men were said to have decided "pretty generally" how soon Anglo-American supply schedules can shoulder the burden of an all-out attack on the European continent.

British spokesmen, authors of this general assertion, for reasons of military secrecy declined to divulge the nature of the decisions reached, but acknowledged that Lyttelton's mission would result in a further coordination of the British-American "victory" program to speed the turnover of planes, tanks and ships.

Senate Votes War On Nazi Satellites

In rapid succession, the Senate yesterday unanimously declared war on the three central European countries which are supporting the Axis Powers.

The resolutions declaring that a state of war with Hungary, Rumania, and Bulgaria were passed in record time by the House Wednesday and will now go to the White House for the President's signature. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to sign them today.

The roll call votes were as follows: Hungary, 71 to 0; Rumania, 73 to 0; and Bulgaria, 67 to 0.

Kennedy Asks to Have Poems Of 'Faith, Freedom' Printed

Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Democrat) of New York said yesterday hearings will be held soon on a resolution introduced by him to have a manuscript entitled "Poems of Faith and Freedom" printed as a document.

The poems—15 in number—were compiled in the office of Joseph Auslander, consultant in English poetry for the Library of Congress, and have been on display at the library since December.

Representative Kennedy said he felt the poems should be printed for general distribution among both soldiers and civilians. "They are great national treasures, written in times of crises, and belong to all the people. The actual manuscripts are in the collection and should be reproduced, along with the words of explanation by Mr. Auslander," he declared.

Hearings will be conducted by the Committee on Printing, of which Representing Jarman (Democrat) of Alabama, is chairman. Representative Kennedy said he considered the project would be comparatively inexpensive and said his ideas were that about 100,000 copies should be printed first and later editions based on the demand.

"I am sure the popularity would be great and that we would be back for 100,000 more copies soon," he asserted.

The poems and their authors are: "The Ship of State" (conclusion of "The Building of the Ship"), by H. W. Longfellow; "Say Not, The Struggle Nought Availeth," by Arthur Hugh Clough; "For A' That and A' That," by Robert Burns; "Laon and Cythna" (extract, Canto IX), by P. B. Shelley; "We Are the Music-Makers," by Arthur O'Shaughnessy; "America," by S. F. Smith; "Battle Hymn of the Republic," by Julia Ward Howe; "O Captain! My Captain!" by Walt Whitman; "America Was Promises" (extract), by Archibald MacLeish; "Litany for Dictatorships" (extracts), by Stephen Vincent Benet; "Plain-Chant for America," by Katherine Garrison Chapin; "The Soldier," by Rupert Brooke; "The Peacemaker," by Joyce Kilmer; "In Flanders Fields," by John McCrae, and "High Flight," by John Gillespie Magee, jr.

The exhibit of these poems is one of the most popular held at the Library of Congress and has brought in many letters, Representative Kennedy pointed out.

One of the manuscripts, that for the Arthur Hugh Clough poem, was loaned by Winston Churchill, who used the work in one of his speeches to the British people. "High Flight," only poem of this war, was written by a young Washington flier killed in action with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

80 Face Trial In Nassau Riots That Killed Three

Nassau, Bahamas, June 4 (AP).—Eighty persons will be tried for participating in widespread riots that cost three lives and extensive property damage here Monday, government authorities disclosed today.

The riots flared after unskilled laborers on a big American project started a demonstration against their 4 shillings (about 80 cents) a day wages.

The Duke of Windsor, who hurried back from Washington to occupy his post as royal governor, already had started negotiations in connection with the wage rate, which was fixed by agreement of the British and American governments.

About 1500 workers on the American project returned to work today, and except for the 8 p. m. to 6 a. m. curfew regulation which remained in effect, life in the colony appeared normal.

Six Explosives Firms Indicted In Price-Fixing

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 4.—Six firms manufacturing explosives and 10 officials of the companies were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of conspiring to maintain prices "at high, arbitrary and artificial levels."

Named in the indictment were E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., the Hercules Powder Co. and the Atlas Powder Co., Wilmington, Del.; Austin Powder Co. of Cleveland; Illinois Powder Manufacturing Co., St. Louis, and the King Powder Co., Cincinnati.

The defendants controlled 75 per cent of the total volume of commercial explosives and blasting supplies produced in the United States, the indictment said.

A spokesman for the Hercules Co. said the officers had not seen the indictment but "we are not guilty of violating the Antitrust Act." He pointed out that a grand jury in Richmond, Va., threw out indictments against the company May 19 and "if it is the same as that, we believe that the charges cannot be sustained." The other companies made no statements immediately.

Individuals indicted were S. G. Baker, director of sales of the explosive division of du Pont, and his assistant, H. W. Hobson; C. C. Gerow, director of sales for Hercules and his assistant, H. M. Lynch; E. Frost, director of Atlas sales, and his assistant, W. E. Hazletine; Norman T. Alexander, vice president of Austin; M. J. Moses, sales director of Illinois; Eugene King, president, and F. T. Morse, sales manager of the King Co.

The bill said the "conspiracy" dated back to 1938; that sales at collusive prices were made to consumers and jobbers generally, and to Federal, State, county and municipal governments.

Maximum penalty on the charge is one year imprisonment and $5000 fine for individuals. The corporations would be subject to fines only.

day," it added. "Italian troops and some German tanks approached our positions, but the attack was not pressed home. Our columns in the neighborhood attacked the enemy in the rear."

Heavier Assault Expected

British batteries north and south of the German break-through west of Knightsbridge and Tamar continued today to hammer this tenuous salient through which German supplies and fresh armored vehicles were pushing to the east.

It was assumed that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel would make a final determined effort to secure his salient by an even heavier assault on Bir Hacheim and the Allied line running northward from there to Ualeb, on the southern edge of the German-held gap.

Accordingly, the R. A. F. reported today low level attacks on enemy concentrations in the Bir Hacheim area.

Jap Flotillas Roam Pacific; Midway Raided

of the probability of West Coast air raids just a week ago.

"I caution you that these are not the only and last raids," he added, but declined to predict where further attacks would come.

While hesitant to interpret Japan's moves of the past two days, pending further reports, competent observers here believe that the Dutch Harbor attack was intended principally to sound out its defenses and possibly may have been a diversion to cover a strong assault on Midway.

Second Raid a Reconnaissance

Earlier in the day, the Navy announced that the second wave of planes which flew over the Aleutian outpost Wednesday—then announced as an attack—was merely a reconnaissance flight. No bombs were dropped on this second appearance.

With the receipt of this news, military and naval men here concluded that the sortie against Dutch Harbor probably was mainly a "feeler," designed to test how strong this new American base had been made. An attack in force may come elsewhere, they predicted.

When the report of the raid on Midway was flashed, it seemed probably that that island was the principal objective of the Japanese strategy. The little atoll, some 1200 miles northwest of Hawaii, is a vital factor in the whole Pacific war picture.

It is a base for the submarines which prowl Far Eastern waters, raiding Japanese supply lines and bringing back information. It is a base for planes which patrol the mid-Pacific.

An Outpost of Hawaii

In American hands it serves to protect Hawaii, in the same way that Hawaii protects the United States mainland. In Japanese hands, it would be a springboard for an assault on Pearl Harbor.

The Navy's bare announcement did not indicate whether the attack on Midway is simply an attempt to smash its facilities and make it unusable for a time as a submarine and air base, or is an all-out attempt to capture the island. Whichever it is, Midway's garrison is ready for it.

Since Pearl Harbor, the island has been made as strong as it has been possible to make it. One official said that it is "ten times as tough" as then.

Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, whose hard-fighting Marines garrison the island, was asked recently on Capitol Hill if his men still held Midway.

"Yes, sir," replied the Marine Corps commandant, "and we're going to keep on holding it, too."

What United States Army and Navy forces were doing to meet the Japanese threat in the mid-Pacific and Alaskan waters remained, of course, a secret, but it was understood that patrol planes were searching the fog-bound Northern Pacific for the carrier force which sent its planes against Dutch Harbor. Presumably, the main body of the Pacific fleet was deployed in the Central Pacific.

One thing was clear. If the Alaskan raid was intended as a diversion, to draw forces of the Pacific fleet to the Aleutians and leave Midway and Hawaii lightly guarded, it did not succeed. Officials are well aware of the vital importance of holding these two essential points at all cost.

In its early communique on Dutch Harbor, the Navy also announced that the U. S. S. Cythera, a small naval patrol vessel operating in the Atlantic, has been overdue for more than three weeks and "is presumed to be lost."

The 602-ton vessel formerly was the yatch Agawa, built in Scotland in 1907 and converted into a Navy patrol craft early this year. She was commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Thomas W. Rudderow, U. S. N. R., and had a crew of about 28.

The communique also declared:

"1. The situation at Dutch Harbor is at present quiet. Yesterday's first raid by the Japanese appears to have been made primarily to test our defenses. High explosives and incendiary bombs were dropped but, as previously announced, our casualties were light and damage was not extensive. The few fires which were started were quickly extinguished.

"2. The second wave of enemy planes which was reported to have attacked six hours after the initial attack (Communique No. 85) failed to drop any bombs and appears to have been engaged solely in reconnaissance.

"3. The source of the attacking Japanese aircraft has not been definitely determined but they are thought to have been carrier-based."

Ways and Means Committee Has Showdown With Treasury

functions, members formerly had voiced irritation at repeated hammering by the Treasury for its own recommendations, already revised sharply downward by committee action.

Morgenthau's Wednesday night speech lit a long smoking fuse and the lid blew off at yesterday morning's committee session. Members determined to tell the Secretary "that we are writing this tax bill."

Representative Boehne (Democrat) of Indiana, issued a statement citing Section 206 of the National Budget Act, which provides that "no recommendation as to how the revenue needs of the Government should be met, shall be submitted to Congress by any officer or employe of any department or establishment, unless at the request of either House or Congress." It was Boehne who moved in committee to "invite" Morgenthau to appear.

Morgenthau Wan, Doughton Happy

Looking a little wan, Morgenthau left the conference a few steps ahead of Doughton. He told reporters only that "the chairman will have a statement."

Doughton was in high spirits as he greeted newsmen. He jested with them on whether the tax bill will be ready this year or next and chided them for "making much out of nothing."

"I never worked with any man who was a more perfect gentleman than Mr. Morgenthau," he said. "That doesn't mean we always agree. You are bound to have differences with somebody on any tax question."

Under questioning, he said, "it wasn't necessary" to remind Morgenthau of the committee's tax jurisdiction.

"He emphasized it himself," said the chairman. "We appreciate his help and cooperation but after all in the last analysis the tax bill is our responsibility."

to their posts and everything, in general, will be carried out as in previous test alarms here.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, District defense director, wired J. H. Wyse, Virginia defense coordinator, that Washington had decided to cooperate with that State.

This decision brought in Alexandria, Arlington County, and Fairfax County, which are organized as part of this metropolitan area. Carl Budwesky, city manager of Alexandria, previously had announced that city would disregard State-wide Virginia tests if the District failed to participate.

John J. Howard, chief of Virginia air-raid precaustions, announced that representatives of railroads operating in Virginia would meet Monday to decide what steps they should take for blackout observation.

the sinking of two more United States merchant ships in the dangerous waters of the Caribbean Sea, and survivors from one of them reported that machine-gunners on an Axis submarine turned a deadly spray of bullets upon crewmen abandoning ship.

From the other sinking the entire crew of 35 got away safely and spent 88 hours in lifeboats before a naval patrol plane sighted them and directed rescue operations.

The sinkings were the fifty-fourth and fifty-fifth from which survivors had been brought to Florida ports since February 19.

Navy Acts to Tighten Defenses Against Subs

The Navy last night took steps to tighten up its antisubmarine patrol in the mid-Atlantic area.

Capt. Russell S. Crenshaw of 3703 Northampton Street, Washington, D. C., who has been serving as acting commander of the Gulf sea frontier, was appointed assistant commandant of the Fifth Naval District, with headquarters at Norfolk, Va.

He will have charge of antisubmarine activities in the Hampton Roads Area, scene of many torpedo attacks by Axis submarines against American merchant ships.

"The new duties assigned Capt. Crenshaw," an official announcement said, "are in pursuance of the Navy Department's policy of strengthening the organization of the sea frontiers and districts to prosecute more effectively the antisubmarine campaign."

Crenshaw, who is 55 years old, won a Distinguished Service Medal during World War I for his work in arranging commercial convoys and general ship routing. He has served extensively as a gunnery officer with various heavy units of the Pacific Fleet, and was formerly director of the war plans section of the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations.

D. C. Man Tells of Sub Shelling Crew, Killing 3

An Axis submarine which "hung around" for 20 minutes before spraying the crew of a small United States merchantman with machine-gun fire and shrapnel from its deck guns failed completely to dampen the enthusiasm which a Washington man holds for the sea.

PARISH

He is Charles J. Parish, 5140 Conduit Road Northwest, who related last night the death of four of his comrades and the disappearance of eight others from a raft after the ship on which he served as second engineer was torpedoed and sunk somewhere in the Caribbean.

Out of a crew of 29, only 17 have been accounted for, according to Parish who arrived at his home here yesterday to be greeted by his wife and three "almost grown daughters" who attend public school in the District.

Sub Kills 3 Officers

Parish declined to reveal the date of the attack but said that on the night it occurred he was off watch and asleep. The vessel's lookout sighted the submarine "close on the starboard side" long before it opened its deck and machine guns, and a radio message detailing the ship's plight was immediately sent.

When the crew made for the lifeboats, Parish said, the sub's guns went into action and two of the officers were killed as they climbed down ladders.

"They continued to fire even after we were in the lifeboats, and another officer was drilled through the head. The rest of us crouched low in the lifeboat as bullets tore into it. The boat was so badly riddled we had to abandon it and board another."

A fourth man, Parish said, apparently was drowned when he jumped overboard from the ship and was never seen again.

After finally escaping from the zone of attack, Parish said his boat was at sea four days before its distress signal was sighted by a small sloop which towed them to Bonaire, Dutch West Indies. From here, with their six injured colleagues, most of them shrapnel victims, the men were flown to Curacao where the injured were hospitalized. The others were taken to Key West, Fla., after a four-day stay.

Parish said last night he went to sea for about 14 years "some years ago" but had only returned last February. Is he going back? "Absolutely, just as soon as I get my papers straightened out. We lost everything, you know, when the ship went down," he said.

The engineer, a native of Washington, attended primary school here, then finished his schooling in California, returning here in 1922. When he was not at sea, he was principally engaged in the elevator construction industry, he said. His daughters are Patricia and Johanna, who attend Western High School, and Barbara, who goes to Gordon Junior High.

Attack Suspect Held For Grand Jury Action

Isaiah Brooks, 33-year-old Negro who was arrested Tuesday on a charge of criminally attacking a 42-year-old woman in her bedroom, was held for the Grand Jury without bond yesterday when he appeared before Judge Walter J. Casey in Police Court.

10 Die in Fire At California Army Station

Stockton, Calif., June 4 (AP).—Fire, preceded by an explosion, swept quickly through an Army building and left 11 dead and nine others severely burned today.

The nature of the explosion remained undetermined. The flames spread rapidly and those who died, nine soldiers and a civilian fireman, were trapped in the structure.

The blaze started about 11:30 last night and burned for 30 minutes. Lieut. Col. Floyd H. Tull, commanding officer, appointed a board of inquiry to determine what caused the explosion and fire.

The blast apparently did not originate in munition or ordnance stores.

Senate Passes Bill To Give Nelson Antitrust Leeway

The Senate yesterday completed Congressional action on a bill giving War Production Chief Donald Nelson authority to approve war production programs without regard to the antitrust and Federal Trade Commission laws.

The antitrust exemption power was part of a composite measure setting up a 150 million dollar smaller war plants corporation within the WPB to mobilize, through loans, the productive facilities of small business for war purposes.

Showdown Due in House Today on NYA; Dirksen Asks That It Be Wiped Out

An Illinois Republican yesterday tossed a handful of statistics at the National Youth Administration as the House cleared for action today in a showdown scrap over extinction of that erstwhile New Deal relief agency along with the depression-born Civilian Conservation Corps.

The House will meet at 11 a. m. today—an hour earlier than usual—and the sole issue of what is certain to be a bitter contest is the fate of CCC and NYA.

Citing figures to show that it takes about one NYA employe to supervise the training of 11 persons for war work, Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois notified the House that he would offer an amendment today to abolish the NYA and transfer its "training and educational activities" to the Office of Education.

Rider for Appropriation Bill

Dirksen proposes to affix his amendment to the $1,058,451,660 Labor Department-Federal Security Agency appropriation bill which the House is due to pass before recess tonight.

Democratic leaders were confident they could defeat the Dirksen amendment. They were far less certain, however, about their chances of upsetting the Appropriations Committee which struck all funds for CCC—$75,818,000—from the bill before reporting it to the House Wednesday.

Dirksen declared that operation of war training programs by the Office of Education and the NYA constituted "indefensible" duplication of Federal effort. He said consolidation of the two programs would produce better trained war workers.

Declaring that the Office of Education is "thoroughly organized" to handle training, Dirksen called attention of the House to the fact that under programs directed by the agency, 2,192,455 persons are enrolled in preemployment and supplementary training courses. This training, he said, embraces 550 occupations approved by the War Production Board.

CCC Restoration Up

In the face of this activity, he said, NYA maintains 17,939 supervisors for 190,742 trainees. The committee has recommended $53,049,000 for NYA, including its war-training program, while $141,240,000 is carried in the bill for war training under the Office of Education.

The first order of business before the House today will be the Tarver amendment, which would restore to the bill funds recommended by the Appropriations Subcommittee, but rejected by the full committee, to operate 350 CCC camps in Army cantonment construction and forest firefighting.

Representative Tarver (Democrat) of Georgia, offered his amendment as the House reached a portion of the bill authorizing the CCC to dispose of its camp property. By unanimous consent the amendment was passed over until today. Later, when the House came to the NYA items in the bill, they, too, were passed over and the reading of the remainder of the measure was completed.

Wenner Gren Boat Reported Acquired By Mexican Navy

Mexico City, June 4 (AP).—Dispatches from the gulf port of Vera Cruz reported today without official confirmation that the Southern Cross, luxurious yacht of the Swedish industrialist Axel Wenner Gren, now living in Mexico, was taken over by the Mexican navy as an auxiliary vessel.

Wenner Gren, whose name is on the United States blacklist of persons having business dealings with the Axis, had left his yacht at Vera Cruz for months, first under Panamanian registry, then under Mexican.

The dispatches varied as to whether the yacht was purchased by the Navy or given outright by Wenner Gren.

Piston Work Halts in Tiff Over Checker

By the Associated Press

Muskegon, Mich., June 4.—About 1000 employes of the Sealed Power Corp. today halted production of pistons and piston rings being manufactured for about two score war engine builders for the Army and Navy Air Corps.

They remained inside the plant, but declined to work, employe representatives said, until a woman cost and production checker had been removed from the aluminum piston line.

During the morning, the employes received an appeal from Secretary of the Navy Knox urging that they make arrangements "for the immediate shipment of vitally needed finished war materials."

Officials of the employes bargaining committee immediately guaranteed there would be no interference with scheduled shipments.

Until last month, the Sealed Power employes were affiliated with the United Automobile Worker (A. F. of L.), but at that time they voted at a union election to affiliate with the U. A. W.-C. I. O.

Strike Curtails Materials

Pittsburgh, June 4 (AP).—A strike of workmen curtailed work on defense materials today at the Franklin car shops of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Sidney D. Evans, management representative, reported that approximately 300 had quit work in protest against dismissal of a laborer whom the company accused of striking a foreman.

Evans said the strike began yesterday and spread. Negotiations seeking a settlement were under way.

Textile Strike Ends

New Bedford, Mass., June 4 (AP).—After a union threat to blacklist them unless they returned to their looms in the Hathaway Mills, striking weavers went back to work today ending a 10-day unauthorized strike against an increased work load.

The War Labor Board had failed to induce the strikers to return last week and even pleas of the national offices of the United Textile Workers of America (A. F. L.) failed to budge them.

Ration Boards Empowered To Quiz Holders of Gas Cards

States to determine the availability of gasoline supplies, the facilities for the transportation of gasoline, the necessity of conserving tires and the extent to which scrap rubber is being collected, reclaimed and the necessity for and effect of the proposed gasoline rationing.

He insisted that Henderson make a thorough study of the availability of old tires and other scrap rubber for reclamation and use in retreading old tires.

On the House side, Representative James G. Scrugham (Democrat) of Nevada, backed by legislators from 22 oil-producing States, called a protest meeting of all House members for 10:30 a. m. today in the Old House Building Caucus Room to draft, as Representative John M. Houston (Democrat) of Kansas described it, a plan of "combating" Nation-wide rationing.

Ickes Works on Pipeline Plan

Meanwhile, yesterday, Harold L. Ickes, Petroleum Coordinator, reported progress in the proposal to relieve the Eastern gasoline shortage by using reclaimed pipe as a pipeline across the upper Florida Peninsula. Ickes told his press conference: "I think we need no legislation to proceed with the project by using reclaimed pipe. It is a matter now under negotiation with the owners of pipe."

The Senate was told by Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, that the several Federal agencies regulating the petroleum industry should be consolidated for "sake of efficiency and economy."

Ickes, he said, had "the best brains" in the oil industry in his office as petroleum coordinator, but he was "sorry I can't say the same for the Office of Price Administration" in its gasoline rationing program.

The petroleum coordinator indicated there probably would be no increase in over-all Eastern curtailment of gasoline consumption when the permanent coupon book ration system takes effect next month. The over-all cut is 50 per cent and Ickes said he had "no different recommendation" for the WPB under the new program.

Amount Up to OPA

He emphasized, however, that the amount each motorist would receive under the permanent rationing program would be for OPA determination.

The WPB took a step into the situation with appointment by Donald M. Nelson, the chairman, of a special committee to consider the status of petroleum supplies on the Eastern Seaboard. Wayne Johnson, Nelson's advisor on petroleum matters, was put at the committee's head. It will consult with the Maritime Commission and the Office of Petroleum Coordinator about recent pipeline recommendations made by Ickes' office.

In New York yesterday Sol Herzog, general counsel of the Eastern States Gasoline Conference, said the proposed new gasoline rationing plan "means simply that the independent dealer is doomed."

New Warning on Gas Storage Is Sounded

Another warning relative to the unlawful storage of gasoline was issued yesterday by Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter.

"The storage of gasoline in improvised containers, often without proper caps on the openings," he said, "is dangerous. These makeshift methods of storage are particularly hazardous in dwellings and in basements. The fact that such containers are seldom vapor tight and that they can be readily broken introduces the danger of an accumulation of vapor which can be easily ignited by even as remote a source as a pilot light on a hot water heater.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

ASPARAGUS lb. 11¢

Tender, green stalks of New Jersey asparagus . . . priced by the pound so you can buy just the amount you need.

2 Ways to Save on Produce

1. Produce is rushed direct from farm to Safeway. This cuts out unnecessary in-between costs—results in savings and fresher produce, too.

2. Safeway prices nearly all its produce by the pound, which saves you money in wasted leftovers. Because at Safeway you buy just what you can use and you pay only for what you get—not a cent more.

Adventists Open Biennial Camp Meeting

The second coming of Christ and the end of the world is "very near," the Rev. H. J. Detwiler last night, told approximately 2000 Seventh Day Adventists who gathered on the campus of the Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md., for the opening of the tenth biennial session and camp meeting of the Potomac Conference.

Adventists do not believe in setting a time for the second coming of Christ, but they do have faith in the profecies of the Bible.

The Rev. Detwiler, president of the Potomac Conference, based his remarks on the twelfth chapter and fourth verse of Daniel, quoting "many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased in the last generation."

He also quoted the twenty-fourth chapter of Mathew, seventh verse, "Wars and rumors of wars and nations shall rise against each other."

World conditions and the advancement in knowledge during the last generation, which the Rev. Detwiler asserted, has progressed more than any other generation, are all signs of Armageddon, he declared.

Concluding with the prohecy of Mathew that "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all the nations and then shall the end come," the Rev. Detwiler told of the increase in the Adventist Faith. Missionaries, he said, are preaching the faith in 824 languarges and dialects and religious literature is printed in 200 languages.

Representatives from 54 churches in Washington, Maryland and Virginia are attending the event. Sessions will be held in the day and at night through June 14.

Army Will Retire Gen. Ayres June 30

Cleveland, June 4 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Leonard P. Ayres, chief of the Service of Statistics in the War Department at Washington, will be retired for age on June 30 and will return to his duties as a vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., the bank announced today.

General Ayres, who will be 63 in September, was director of the Government Bureau of Statistics in the First World War, and was recalled to Washington to take his present post in 1940.

The Cliche Expert Testifies On Washington

By Bob Considine

The Cliche expert testifies on the City of Washington. (With apologies to Frank Sullivan.)

Prosecutor—Mr. Arthbuthnot, I understand you have visited Washington recently. What was your first impression?

Mr. A.—Washington is a madhouse.

Prosecutor—Is it anything else?

Mr. A.—Certainly, it is a lunatic asylum, except that it is run by the inmates, ha, ha.

Prosecutor—How's the hotel situation?

Mr. A.—Hotels are impossible to get into.

Prosecutor—Are you seeking a commission in the Army or Navy?

Mr. A.—Certainly, but only because I think I'd make a lousy private.

Prosecutor—Would you prefer combat duty?

Mr. A.—I'd prefer combat duty, of course, but I feel it is only fair to state that I am a chronic sufferer from rose fever.

Prosecutor—How about the restaurants?

Mr. A.—Can't get in 'em.

Prosecutor—How about the people who do get in? What sort of service do they get?

Mr. A.—The food is thrown at them.

Prosecutor—How about the bars?

Mr. A.—They are crowded with socialite figures, in and out of public life, seeking surcease from the war.

Prosecutor—Where do you go for your Government information?

Mr. A.—That's easy, Archibald MacLeish's Office of Facts and Figures.

Prosecutor—Where?

Mr. A.—Colonel Donovan's office.

Prosecutor—Will you speak louder?

Mr. A.—Lowell Mellett's Office of Government Reports.

Prosecutor—Come, come, Mr. A. We all know your reputation as a master of the hackneyed phrase. But this is going too far. Where do you really get your information?

Mr. A.—(Lamely) I ask a cop.

Prosecutor—How's the weather?

Mr. A.—Washington is the hottest place in the world.

Prosecutor—How do you account for that?

Mr. A.—It's the humidity.

Prosecutor—You disappoint me, Mr. A. I expected you to say that it was Congress' hot air. That's usually the answer.

Mr. A.—Congress has lost its identity.

Prosecutor—Why do you say that?

Mr. A.—It has adopted a servile air toward Mr. Big.

Prosecutor—I'm glad you brought that up. Who is now living at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Mr. A.—Why, That Man in the White House.

Prosecutor—Guard your tongue, sir. Now let's have that again.

Mr. A.—Our revered Chief Executive.

Prosecutor—(Slyly) How about the girls?

Mr. A.—There are too many girls in Washington. Or, I might add, there are not enough men.

Prosecutor—What have you to say about Washington traffic.

Mr. A.—It is one big snarl. The transportation system is hopelessly inadequate.

Prosecutor—And the cabs?

Mr. A.—There is a critical shortage, though I might add that late afternoons find the streetcars jammed with homecoming humanity.

Prosecutor—How about rents?

Mr. A.—Sky high.

Prosecutor—The ball club?

Mr. A.—(Brightly) Washington is first in peace, first in war and last in the American League.

Prosecutor—How about the city government?

Mr. A.—Rife with inefficiency.

Prosecutor—You're a small business man, Mr. A. What were you on your trip?

Mr. A.—Harried, timorous or truculent.

Prosecutor—What did you experience in connection with getting branch phones when you called Government numbers.

Mr. A.—Trouble.

Prosecutor—Thank you, Mr. A. You've endeared yourself further to all true lovers of the tired phrase, not to mention fanciers of corn. Tell me, before leaving the witness stand, what gave you the biggest shock in Washington?

Mr. A.—I saw a buck private and an able bodied seaman, with my own eyes.

Senate Paves Way for 3-A Draft

classes, the scale of allowances for Class B dependents would be lower. A parent, in this instance, would receive $20; two parents, $30; while a soldier with one parent and a brother and a sister would be able to allot $25 to them and $5 extra if he has an additional brother or sister.

If a man in the service wished allowances to be paid to dependents in both classes, he would be required to allot $5 from his pay in addition to the $22 which would be deducted for the benefit of his wife. For the service man with only Class-B dependents, the deduction would be $22.

A provision of the Johnson bill would authorize President Roosevelt to direct the Selective Service to draft men by classes which could be based on the marital status of registrants. The Nation's need for combat manpower may necessitate induction of some men now classified 3-A before the end of this year, Selective Service officials have warned.

In the Senate's brief discussion of the bill, Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, author of a measure to set up definite standards for draft deferment, declared that there are enough younger men available for service without drafting married men over 30 until "everybody else has been drafted."

Monckton Reported Shot by Assassin

London, June 4 (INS).—Sir Walter Monckton, former British minister of state for the Middle East, was slightly wounded in an assassination attempt in Egypt, the Berlin radio and Nazi-controlled Paris station reported today, quoting Cairo advices.

In Cairo, the Axis report was categorically denied.

The Berlin radio claimed Egyptian Nationalists carried out the attempt when Monckton's car was entering Tanta, in northern Egypt.

WAR TIME COMMUNIQUES. Burt Lopatin, owner of Burt's Trans-Lux, will join the Coast Guard on Monday as chief petty officer. His smart young wife will keep the home fires burning at Burt's for the duration. . . . Jimmy Hall, owner of Olmstead's Grill, has sold this fine spot. He's been commissioned in the Marine Corps and when we next hear from Jimmy, the news will probably be that his specialty is broiled Japs instead of broiled steaks . . . At last—a jive song for soldiers! It's "Doug-Doug-Doug MacArthur," now being sung by "Jivin' Jack" Schaffer at the Casino Royal and evoking shouts and whistles of approval as well as applause . . . Huge pictures of MacArthur and Pershing are the newest adornments of the cocktail lounge of Restaurant "400" . . . "Freedom Means Victory" is the name of a new and inspiring patriotic number written by Mayfair's pianist, Dorothy Hutcheson . . . Madrillon's Carr and Don are boasting "A Light Inside the White House," new song creation by a young Washington composer . . . The Rainbow Room staff looks down in the mouth when you mention Bill Winters, former waiter there. Bill is listed among the "missing" American soldiers in the Philippines . . . Frank Parrotta of the FHA was given a rousing "off to camp" farewell party in the Hi Hat by his co-workers . . . The Crossroads management, always up-to-the-minute, approves of those gals who are saving the country's fabrics by wearing slacks. We saw several damsels in slacks dancing at the Crossroads one evening. And they all looked elegant . . . And don't forget that it's "War Bond Day" again today at the Lafayette Hotel with half of the gross receipts going into war bond purchases.

"Chuck" Peterson, hot trumpet ace of Tommy Dorsey's band, is due to shortly join Les Brown's orchestra, now doing such great hot rhythm at the Victory Room.

JANE PICKENS, now starred at Del Rio, isn't the only rare lass in the spot. Marianne Arden, Viennese singer and pianist, does light musical comedy numbers with a charming touch. Arlene Holland, singer with Bernie Cummins' Band, is pretty as a black-eyed Susan, does anazzy harmonizing. And the check and ziggie girls look like Petty models.

NEW BALALAIKA REVUE. Mischa Bess, head man and master showman at the Balalaika, has a new revue all polished up, will probably present it this evening for the first time. As a graduate of the world famous "Chauve Souris," Mischa has all sorts of exotic Slavic comedy at his finger tips, has infused his artistry into the Balalaika's Russian troupe. You'll not only enjoy the Balalaika revue but want to see it over and over.

Finals in the Neptune Room's "Tin Pan Alley Nights" will be held next Tuesday. Better rush them that new song you've written, especially if it's a war number. The top selection by a local composer will be played at the Capitol Theater and over WINX.

FEMMES' CORNER. Organist Ida Clarke who's been in Canada for a few days, will be back at the Lounge Riviera console this evening . . . If there's a slightly tense atmosphere in the Mayflower Lounge in the afternoon, it's because the florist is tardy with the big red rose that Singer Alison Andrews always tosses to some lucky guest, often a service man . . . The completely charming little new hostess (with the up hair-do) at Restaurant "823" is Mary Trueblood from Washington, N. C. You may have seen her at the Willard . . . Bob Seidell, saxist with Paul Kain's Band at Glen Echo, daringly comes out with his idea of an ideal wife. He says, "My idea of a wife who would also be a dream girl is one who would try to understand her husband's work enough to adjust her life to his interests. A wife should understand her husband's financial standing and be satisfied with it." You're telling the wives, Bob!

DON'T MISS—POSITIVELY. The Rollini Tri at El Patio. They're doing both dance music and their theater specialties which always bring down the house. It may be a long time before you see Adrian Rollini again. When he finishes his month's engagement at El Patio, he's going to open his own club in Newark . . . And don't skip dropping into jolly little Merry-Land. Accordionist Cliff Jones is back from his Alabama vacation and big Al Norton, who literally knows thousands of people, is in his best form . . . And if it drizzles and you can't stay on the Starlight Roof, don't forget to remember that you can go down to the street level of the Roger Smith Hotel and enjoy Arthur Warren's music in the air-cooled Cafe Caprice just as much as on the roof . . . Don't miss dining at La Salle du Bois. One dinner will make you a regular customer . . . If you wish to dine with much elegance, both as to cuisine and music, in the heart of the downtown district, be sure that the Pall Mall Room is an excellent choice . . . And if you yearn for bona fide Pan-American rhythm, you'll be right in heading for the Copocabana and Juan Velasquez's Rumba Band.

Hale Hamilton, jr., now appearing at the Lotus, is the nephew of Hale Hamilton, noted screen and stage acter, who died in Hollywood last week.

subdue the sullen hate of the freedom-loving Czechs.

And so, on last Tuesday, the propaganda minister of the puppet Czech government finally revealed what had only been hinted before—that young Czechs, trained abroad, had come in numbers by night out of the skies with arms and explosives to strike at the Nazi oppressors. The minister, Emanuel Moravec, insisted that most of the 'chutists had been rounded up, that therefore no special precautions for Nazi officials had been thought necessary. But then he admitted a few had escaped and that these "sufficed to bring misfortune to us."

That misfortune, he said, consisted not only of the attack on Heydrich.

"They (the parachutists) were told that revolution was imminent in Bohemia and Moravia. As a signal for the uprising, a number of assaults were carried out against prominent German and Czech personalities and a series of attacks were made against industrial plants, public buildings and other institutions."

German Version Of Assassination

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), June 4 (AP).—The fatal attack on Reichsprotector Reinhard Heydrich was carried out by both bomb and automatic pistol made in Britain, the German radio stated today in a dispatch from Prague giving the first complete German version of the assassination.

The dispatch, written by the Transocean News Agency correspondent Joseph Schmidt, follows:

"Investigations of the attempt on the life of Reinhard Heydrich showed beyond a doubt that the weapons used were of British make, according to an official statement issued here.

"The following details were made known:

"The attempt on the life of Heydrich was carried out on a steep hairpin curve which did not enable the driver to look far ahead of him. The perpetrators waited behind a corner so that the driver, who had to slow down, saw one only in the last minute when he was close to the mudguard with the automatic pistol already raised.

"This pistol, which he had concealed beneath his coat, failed, however. He threw it away and ran away. The weapon is of British make. The same automatic pistols were found in the possession of some parachute agents who had been dropped by British planes over the protectorate.

"At the side of the first perpetrator having the automatic pistol was a second man, who threw a bomb. He had to throw it very quickly lest it should explode in his hand. Therefore he threw it at the right inner side of the car.

"The bomb exploded in the direction in which it was thrown, tore the right side, and destroyed the rear of the inside of the car.'

"The Deputy Reichsprotector (Heydrich) however, sat next to the driver. There was no one else in the car. One fragment of the bomb flew to the right, pierced the seat and hit Haydrich. Of this bomb, only small particles and the cap remained.

"Two bags, carried over their shoulders, were left behind by the perpetrators. One reserve bomb was found in each Both are of British make. They both have the same fusing as those used by the British military aganist German tanks in Africa."

TempleHeights Sale to U. S. Asked in Bill

A bill authorizing the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to purchase the Masonic-owned Temple Heights property for wartime use as an office building or recreation center for Federal employes was introduced yesterday by Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas.

The property includes a 9-acre wooded tract and a four-story building and is located on the block bounded by Connecticut Avenue, Columbia Road, Florida Avenue and Nineteenth Street. It has been described as the last remaining piece of undeveloped downtown property.

Capper proposed that the land be used as a site for a Civil War memorial after the emergency is over. The bill authorizes an appropriation of $900,000 with which to purchase the property.

Now called Temple Heights, it was once known as the Deane estate and is the site of a 300-year-old oak tree. The Masons, who acquired the land in 1922, sought two years ago to sell it to a syndicate for the erection of an apartment hotel. The transaction was reportedly blocked, however, by a zoning commission ruling.

Wanted—Nurses

Washington's critical shortage of nurses comes at a time when the city's hospitals are jammed to the roofs with patients. The construction of additions to both public and private hospitals is regarded as imperative to meet the city's normal requirements, to say nothing of a reserve for possible air raids or a wartime epidemic. Yet we must now face the disconcerting fact that nurses are not available to operate some of the existing hospital wards. That means a real crisis in caring for the sick.

Commissioner Mason has done well to give the emergency prompt attention. Much can undoubtedly be done to bring about more effective use of the nurses now in service and to induce retired nurses to return to their profession. Women capable of rendering this type of service in wartime should feel the patriotic call to duty no less keenly than do aviators or tool makers. It is not necessary for all of them to go to the field of battle. They also serve their country who meet emergency health needs at home.

When the patriotic motive has been pointedly emphasized, however, the fact remains that the average hospital nurse is grossly underpaid. Here is a case in which an adjustment of pay would be entirely in keeping with the President's desire to confine wage increases to substandard groups. Average salaries of $80 a month for nurses were low before the war. Now they are so low that the inadequacy of pay is helping to cripple our hospitals at a time when they must have more space and additional personnel.

On The Alert

The fact that the Dutch Harbor raids were effectively parried should give us no cause for complacence. Secretary Stimson, who had previously warned the Nation to expect an attack on American territory as a reprisal for the bombing of Tokyo, has issued a new warning. The Dutch Harbor attacks, he said, were "not the only and last raids" to be expected on American territory.

Dutch Harbor may be raided again. Indeed, the attack may be carried to the Alaskan mainland or the mainland of the United States, to Pearl Harbor or the Panama Canal. We must be forever on our guard. Nonetheless it is encouraging to note that the lack of alertness that characterized the American position at Pearl Harbor on December 7 was happily absent at Dutch Harbor on June 3.

Alimony

It is difficult to find any plausible argument against the proposal to classify alimony receipts as taxable income. This might not, to be sure, result in any appreciable increase of revenue. Under the present system it is in effect the divorced husband who pays the tax, since he is not permitted to deduct the payments. But, just the same, if the proposal approved the other day by the Ways and Means Committee to exempt alimony payments and to tax alimony receipts is enacted into the next revenue bill it will be a step toward a much needed reform.

The concept and practice of alimony belongs to a time when divorces were rare and the economic dependency of women was virtually complete. There are still numerous instances where the alternative to alimony would mean destitution for the wife. In these and in all cases involving young children the husband's responsibility is manifest. But there are equally numerous cases in which alimony payments seem utterly anomalous. Such are the cases in which the woman's income is several times that of the divorced husband and those cases in which the alimony payments continue after the woman has remarried. There have been instances in which women have concurrently collected alimony from several former husbands.

There are also plenty of cases in which our chaotic and anachronistic divorce laws have made it possible for the principle of alimony to be used frankly as an instrument of revenge. In the early years of the great depression the jails in some States were full of unemployed and penniless men arrested and held indefinitely on the complaint of former wives because of arrears of alimony. One example was the pathetic "alimony row" in the Tombs Prison of New York City, where men never convicted of any crime were held without apparent hope of release. In nearly all such instances the wife knew perfectly well that her complaints would automatically eliminate any hope of a resumption of the payments.

The mere taxation of alimony income will not, of course, remove all the abuses, but it will at least mitigate one of the minor abuses. Meanwhile, it might be well for moralists and sociologists to consider whether the prospect of alimony—that is to say, the possibility of ample income without domestic responsibility—is not among the factors in our steadily increasing and now alarming divorce rate.

Rationing, New Style

The crude system of gasoline rationing now in effect was accepted with the understanding that it would be only a temporary expedient to be used until a more equitable allocation of the limited supplies could be worked out. Fortunately that view has now been officially underlined by the OPA. The new system to take effect next month will put everyone on the same footing and departures from that basic allocation will have to be justified in each individual case.

Elimination of "X" cards would be essential under any plan that the OPA might devise. The idea that some individuals are entitled to an unlimited supply of gasoline when the public in general is under strict rationing is patently obnoxious in a democracy. And that is precisely the impression to which the "X" cards have given rise, regardless of the fact that gasoline obtained under them is supposed to be used only for essential purposes. So "X" cards must go to strengthen the faith of the people in the rationing system.

Under the new plan, moreover, the citizen will not be permitted to write his own ration ticket. Everyone will start with the basic minimum ration, amounting to something less than 4 gallons per week. Allotments of motor fuel above that amount will have to be justified in writing through a detailed questionnaire. Undoubtedly this plan will come closer to an equitable division of limited supplies, and leaks in the present system will be closed by requiring dealers to turn in ration coupons in order to replenish their gasoline supplies.

The system will never be made really equitable, however, until it becomes Nation-wide. It is a national peril that has made it necessary to curtail the use of motor cars for pleasure. That peril should be met by national measures. The unfairness of imposing the entire burden upon 30 million motorists on the Eastern Seaboard is emphasized by the statement that the basic ration can be raised to nearly 4 gallons a week if the system is Nation-wide, but must be kept at 3 gallons if rationing is limited to the areas formerly served by tankers.

Conservation of rubber also demands Nation-wide restraint in the use of automobiles. So far as we can now see, there will be virtually no rubber for civilian use for the next two years. Existing tires must somehow be made to last over that period, at least in sufficiently great numbers to prevent any breakdown in essential transportation. The rationing of gasoline to all users in America is certainly the most practical means of accomplishing this objective. And it is a trivial sacrifice compared to that required of our young men in the front lines.

Conserving Tonnage

Our shipping losses have become so serious that at last the step has been taken to tighten control over civilian imports. This move will make it possible to utilize shipping space more effectively, particularly in inter-American trade.

That trade has lately been mounting. A few days ago it was officially announced that our import balance of trade with the 20 Latin-American republics had increased 46 per cent compared with a year ago. Taken by itself, this statement would mean little, since an increased import balance may result from a contraction of exports as well as from an expansion of imports. But, as a matter of fact, we have been increasing our exports to Latin America while our import balance in trade with that area has been rising. That is a clear indication that our purchases of Latin-American products have been rapidly expanding.

In an earlier survey of the 1941 record, Dr. Henry Chalmers of the Department of Commerce said that increased purchases by the United States "appear to have offset in value almost the entire loss to Latin America from the practical closing off of the continent of Europe." The result has been a striking shift of our trade balance from an excess of exports in trade with Latin America in 1940 to an excess of imports during the succeeding period. However, it should be kept in mind that our trade balance with Latin America as a whole is normally "unfavorable." The three years in which balances were in our favor were really the abnormal years.

Despite all these reservations, there is no doubt that we have been doing business on a rapidly expanding scale with our southern neighbors. That expansion has been due in part to dislocations caused by the war, in part to the needs of our defense program and finally to our politically inspired effort to relieve economic distress in the Americas. Now the time has come to view this development in the light of the most pressing need of all—need of more cargo space to transport goods essential to prosecution of our war effort.

Detailed data in regard to the movement of goods and the ship tonnages required for transportation of specified cargoes is necessarily confidential. But even in the absence of such information, we know full well that a good deal of our Latin-American trade is not essential to our war effort. Ships are needed, to be sure, to transport strategic Latin-American products such as bauxite, copper, petroleum, tungsten and tin. But we could get along with a lot less coffee or none at all, and reduce our consumption of cocoa, bananas, etc., in order to release ships for carriage of more essential supplies or shipments to overseas fighting forces. It has been estimated, for example, that the bringing of Brazil's annual coffee quota to our Gulf ports would require no less than 120 voyages of 5000-ton freighters.

As a result of the acute shipping situation, the WPB has accordingly moved to extend the Government's already far-reaching controls over strategic imports to cover less essential civilian commodities. The order, effective July 2, prohibits purchases of any commodity for import without prior official approval. This control over purchases will also enable the Government in effect to control utilization of shipping space in foreign carriers as well as those flying the American flag.

Specifically it is expected that one of the first effects of the order will be to restrict importation of such South American products as coffee, cocoa, bananas and beef. The extent and severity of these restriction will presumably depend upon the shipping situation. Obviously our war needs must take precedence over all other considerations. But since the good will and cooperation of Latin-American countries lend strength to our arms, the Government will undoubtedly make no move to restrain trade without very good cause.

Labor Quarrel

Philip Murray long has borne in silence the sinister effort of Mr. Lewis to undermine his authority as president of the C. I. O. Now he has chosen to meet the challenge in the open. And, much as most of us would like to see all our private quarrels merged into the Big Quarrel, the country, we feel sure, will wish Mr. Murray well. It is better to meet head-on the kind of test of strength that Mr. Lewis has forced. Mr. Murray would always have been handicapped in his present job of putting his leadership of the C. I. O. at the service of his country if he had continued to brook the serpent-like opposition of Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Lewis seems to have been taken aback by Mr. Murray's forthright challenge. The C. I. O. president, releasing an indignation which must have been boiling within him for a year, called Mr. Lewis a traitor to labor and an inciter to treason. All that Mr. Lewis says in reply is a variant of the "Have you stopped beating your wife?" retort. He calls upon Mr. Murray to say that he renounces communism, otherwise he will be expelled from the United Mine Workers. It is a crass riposte which will impress nobody but Mr. Lewis himself. If Mr. Lewis keeps the tussle on this plane, Mr. Murray should have no difficulty in reasserting his leadership. He would then be given an opportunity of meeting in an equally decisive way another challenge which he has hitherto shown a tendency to dodge. That is the challenge to labor statesmanship which is offered by the economic problem of winning this war without inflation.

Ending The CCC

Compliments are due to the House Appropriations Committee for voting to eliminate from an appropriation bill a $75,800,000 fund for maintenance of the CCC. The reason for its action was a well-founded belief that the CCC is "no longer necessary." The organization had already had its appropriation severely cut and the number of camps under its control was to be rapidly reduced in consequence. But why should any camps at all be left under the management of CCC officials who are now supposed to be pursuing strictly military objectives? Why not transfer its activities, insofar as they contribute to the war effort and defense training, to agencies set up to further our war work? Such a shift would entail substantial savings in salaries and overhead expenses and would, we believe, make for greater efficiency. The chief objection to the move, of course, is that it would entail a disappearance from the scene of some officials who naturally cling to their jobs and hope that when the war is over, they will still have a place in the Government service.

BY THIS STRANGE RULE

By the apple trees we tell the spring
Not by time.
Days have no fragrant bloom
To hide their grime,
But trees can blush with coloring
In arcs that climb.
By flowered riches clustered high
Not by gold,
And by a leaf-touched plume
Is spring controlled.
The summer wealth is measured by
What trees foretold.

Futility of Hate

By abolishing its army "hate schools" Britain takes a step in the right direction. A hate psychology built up against the German people during the war will translate itself inevitably into a desire for revenge upon them after the war. It will hinder the postwar accord for which we claim we are fighting. A vengeful peace will keep festering an ulcer of pent-up German resentment, the kind of resentment that after the Versailles Treaty made Hitler's rise possible.

Dr. Goebbels keeps the war-sick German people behind his Fuehrer by describing the ferocious hate he alleges the world now holds for Germany and the terrible accounting its enemies will demand of it if it loses the war. An announcement, directed to the German people over the heads of their masters, that the United Nations do not seek a punitive peace will give the lie to that shrewd bit of propaganda, and will shorten the war by encouraging the already smouldering disaffection within the Reich.

What will revenge seeking cost? It will surely prolong the war. For Germans will prefer even their present sorry lot to the uncertain lot they could envisage under the heel of a vindictive victor. And every month the war continues costs the United Nations more dollars and more young lives. (Incidentally it means more months of tire and gasoline rationing.) Revenge seeking will impede our statesmen from achieving that longed for peace so just and charitable that under it the germs of future wars cannot breed.

German People

It seems to me the wanton havoc and destruction caused by the German people warrant their isolation and virtual extinction upon the final triumph of the Allied arms.

Those who have not experienced the ruin and sorrow spread by these human beasts are saying that we should practice Christian ideals in the treatment of these Huns when our arms triumph. Doesn't it seem we should practice a little realism when the time comes, instead of being "idealists?" I am sure the English will appreciate my view from their actual experience with the savagery of these German brutes.

These "idealists" say when the German people divorce themselves from Hitler and his crowd they may then be permitted to go scot free from responsibility for their savagery. In other words, they will blame Hitler and his gangsters for the entire savage business and claim the German people had no say in the matter.

Parade Reaction

To the Colonel who said "It's a damn shame," I'd like to explain the lack of handclapping at the parade Saturday this way.

Here is an inspiring display of our armed might. Every thinking citizen must be thrilled by it!

But we who watch the parade have men of our own in the armed services, and this brings home the grim reality of war. Can we help it if a lump rises in our throat and we don't feel like clapping?

Certainly we are proud of these marching men—our defense now so necessary against aggression. Certainly we realize the work involved in getting this display of mobilization before the people. Certainly we appreciate it, not noisily, but deeply.

Thoughtfulness, not complacency, I claim.

Lay Off Congress

Isn't it about time to lay off the criticism of Congressmen?

Lurid headlines in the press, stentorian denunciations over the air. The "open season" on Congress seems to be from January 1 to December 31, both dates inclusive, with the option of renewing from year to year.

These men are the elected leaders in their communities. In accordance with republican practice as assured by the Constitution and Bill of Rights, these men are the leaders elected by their fellow men to represent the various sections of the Nation in our Capital City.

They are not morons, not criminals, just leading Americans.

They are entitled to the respect of the people and some of these self-appointed radio and newspaper patriots, who never will get closer to a Hun or a Jap than a typewriter, ought to lay off for the good of our country.

Complaints Unheeded

What kind of government have we in this city that people can be annoyed day after day by a yelping dog that keeps up its cries by the hours and nothing can be done about it? Any other city would have the police suppress such a nuisance, but here appeals to them are of no avail, nor are complaints to the corporation counsel, who ignores them. I am told that to get anything done it is necessary to get a group of complainants to go to the Police Court and place a charge, probably spending hours and perhaps days on the matter. I am also told that this particular dog is licensed and so has license to disturb the neighborhood. When a motorist runs afoul of the public good, his license is taken away. Why should a dog be treated with more consideration.

Post-War Homes

In all the talk of post-war conditions, there is never any going to the root of the matter—homes.

To what kind of homes will these men return? Men who have faced stark reality, death and worse than death, shattered nerves and maimed bodies.

They should come to homes where love, loyalty, understanding and peace abide—where there is Christian living and children attest the security of the knowledge that dad and mom are on the job to make their home "a go."

The prairie and mountain women made such homes and it did not take a lot of money—for where love is, there is no need of lots of money. Sacrifice, toil and even death mean nothing to those who really love. We mothers know. So let us women take up the slogan of our men. "We have done it before and we will do it again."

JUST THINKING.

Hamburg Next?

That "War is Hell" has frequently been pointed out; hence the responsibility of the people of a country to keep their government from going to war except as a last resort. This the German people did not, perhaps could not, do. Now they must take the consequences. Not even the brutal terror which Hitler unleashed against the German people from 1933 to 1938 was sufficient to cause them to revolt against him. They were too well trained in obedience, and now they must suffer the penalty.

Saturday night it was Cologne; Monday night it was Essen. Every German must be thinking "Where next?" I nominate for the next target of the R. A. F. the great Elbe port of Hamburg, from which I derive my name. It is the largest harbor on the continent, and the base for most of Hitler's subs and surface ships. Also, it is the section of Germany most anti-Nazi in sentiment, and a wrecking of Hamburg would signify that we really are going to destroy Germany completely unless the Germans revolt and kick the Nazis to Hell. If Hamburg, with its anti-Nazi traditions, is smashed, then no German will sleep safely in his bed, and the Hitler regime will totter.

The time for mercy and waiting is past; let the Nazi beasts incur, at long last, the hatred of their own people, as the responsible cause of the destruction in which the R. A. F. merely acts as the avenging arm of the suppressed people of the Continent. No people will long endure such punishment; the German is a little more pig-headed than other men, but even he can learn, if the lesson is taught to him "the hard way."

Too Much Talk

A farmer in our county once had a parrot. This bird was sufficiently domesticated to enjoy the freedom of the farm. A favorite perch was the top of a cherry tree, from which she could view the doings of Towser, the family dog.

Frequently Polly would call out: "Sic 'em, Towser, sic 'em," and Towser would go tearing down the road, looking for something to "sic." with great glee she would watch Towser return, much dejected and dragging his tail behind him.

But one day Polly was strutting on the lawn when Towser appeared. She forgot that she was not up in the cherry tree and again she screeched, "Sic 'em, Towser, sic 'em." The only thing Towser saw to "sic" was Polly, and he sicked her a plenty.

After the fray Polly tried to pull herself together. She smoothed out her plumage and disentangled some of her tail feathers. Then she fluttered back to her perch in the cherry tree where she properly belonged, and she began to soliloquize. "Polly," she said, "Polly, the trouble with you is that you talk too damn much."

I commend this story to official Washington, and that includes cabinet officers, chairmen of important congressional committees and the heads of innumerable alphabet departments.

Because of the conflicting stories coming from Washington about gas and rubber and the freezing of labor in defense industries and alternate waves of optimism and pessimism concerning the progress of the war, we folks back home have become much bewildered. Some of us have begun to pray the prayer of the chap who became lost at night in the midst of a terrific thunderstorm. "Lord," he prayed most fervently, "Please give me more light and less noise."

The Post Impressionist

The Back Of Beyond

There were many Chinese in Kuala Lumpur, more than any other race, excepting of course the native Malays. They preferred the poises of the street and sat in front of their open shops all day, spitting and clearing their throats. Now and then you would hear the flute of a solitary Chinaman who sat alone—and blew over and over a sad minor note. The thoughts of the flute-player seemed far away—perhaps in China.

Inside the Chinese shops were oil lamps that smoked and made a hot greasy smell. Outside were hung enormous lanterns of translucent parchment with sprawling Chinese characters in red and black. They hung all up and down the street like luminous moons. The Chinese delighted in a native sort of melon called durian. It was like custard inside and full of seeds and had a penetrating and offensive smell. When this fruit was ripe the Chinese spat out the seeds and threw the rinds into the street until they piled up high and were distinguishable a long way off from all other smells. There was always an uproar in the Chinese street and much shouting and fighting. Not very serious fighting, but the love of making a great and constant noise, which seems a part of the Chinese nature.

In the Indian shops were piles of neatly folded silks and in the corners of the shops stood pots of slow-burning sweet gums. You knew right away when you were in the Indian quarter by the dry brown smell, which was quite different from the wet yellow smells of the Chinese.

Our bungalow was in a big compound in the plains outside the town. It was smothered by a curtain of pinkish-purple bougainvillaea. A high bamboo-hedge shielded us from the road. In the early mornings blue-gray water-buffalo lurched down this road with small native boys astride their wide flanks. They kicked the buffalo with their naked heels and filled the air with shrill cries. There was a constant stream of native life passing down the road. You could watch a procession of heads over the top of the hedge, but there was no sound in the soft red dust, because no one wore shoes.

Sometimes a Chinese paralyzed by beri-beri tapped slowly down the road with big bamboo rods to support him. He could not bend his knees and did a sort of slow goose-step. Beri-beri at this time was a serious problem. Hundreds of thousands of Chinese labor had been brought to the Malay States to work in the tin mines and tend the rubber-plantations. The prosperity and revenue of the country depended upon their labor. But almost at once the Chinese coolies contracted this baffling disease, which paralyzed but did not kill them and made them useless as workers.

The road going past our bungalow was the main highway of the Malay Peninsula. After it left the plains it disappeared into the hills. The country was wild at this time and infested with gang-robbers who descended upon the rubber and coffee plantations on pay nights. They not only took all the money in sight but robbed the native women of their chains and jewels and tore the rings off their fingers. Sometimes when the rings stuck they cut the women's fingers off and threw the women into the wells. My Chinese amah elaborated and delighted in these stories. But you never knew who was in the procession on the other side of the hedge.

At night we sat in our long chairs out under the sky. It was such a relief to have no sun to fear. Most of the stars above us were strange stars, and very yellow, and far apart. The Southern Cross came up star by star across the plain. It was low in the sky and never stayed long. There was the False Cross first, made of irregular stars—and then the real Cross, very lonely in a big patch of empty sky. It hung to one side, and then slipped back again over the Equator and out of sight.

The night was noisier than the day and the noises very near. There was a Chinese village some miles away but we could hear clearly the crashing of brass cymbals and the high shrill singing. Much nearer was an Indian temple, where the priests, or temple-boys, blew long melancholy blasts on their conch-shells. It made a terrifying sound. Everything seemed to have come to life after the long stupefying heat of the day had passed. Even the indolent Malays got out their tomtoms, and when the moon was full beat their drums all night to keep away the evil spirits.

It was a strange country and quite off the map when we were there. But out of the mixed and alien races, with their different religions, and traditions and blood, the British were whipping into shape a new order which promised to all security and justice and peace.

ELIZABETH WASHBURN WRIGHT.

Attack In The West

I'm at a loss to understand why the United Nations don't attack Hitler on all sides now and end this war once and for all.

Hitler himself has admitted that a two-front war would mean his defeat. The Russians are keeping him busy in the East. Why don't England and the United States attack him in the West?

The help which the French people have given the Commandos and the sabotage going on in occupied Europe leave no doubt in my mind that these people would welcome an invasion of the continent.

The United Nations are now producing as many tanks and planes as Hitler; we have large armies trained and ready to fight; the people at home are behind the war with all they've got—what are we waiting for?

Seven-Point Program

By Ernest Lindley

Congress Fails to Lower Living Costs

MORE than five weeks have now passed since the President presented his seven-point program for keeping the cost of living down. It cannot be said that the President spoke prematurely. He came forward only after months of agitation in the press and by members of his own Administration, and only when action could no longer be postponed without danger of disastrous and irreparable consequences. And, even then, his program was, in many respects, too narrow and too mild, in the opinion of some of his most intelligent and foresighted advisers.

LINDLEY

To the present, only four of the seven points in the program have been translated into action. The first, and most far-reaching, was the fixing of over-all price ceilings. The second is rationing, which has only begun. Here interest has been focused on the rationing of one commodity, gasoline, which has been undertaken for reasons other than the prevention of inflation. But the rationing of articles of civilian consumption is bound to spread during the next several months, all the more quickly since imports of such Central and South American products as coffee, cocoa and bananas are to be reduced.

The Office of Price Administration, which is responsible for most price ceilings and rationing, has acted energetically and boldly. This is not surprising, in view of Leon Henderson's record, especially since the beginning of the national defense effort in 1940. Repeatedly he has seen ahead and has fought to obtain the action which others thought unnecessary. It is true that for a long time Henderson believed that general price freezing could be avoided. But this assumed that other measures were to be taken to curb inflation. Most of these measures were not taken, and some have not been taken yet.

INSTALLMENT CREDIT has been curtailed, partly by regulations issued by the Federal Reserve Board and partly because automobiles, refrigerators and other durable goods usually bought on the installment plan are no longer generally available. But, as this column recently pointed out, using an analysis of the Securities and Exchange Commission, there was no sign through the first quarter of this year that American citizens were paying off their personal debts more rapidly than they were required to.

The Treasury has made some progress in persuading workers to buy war bonds regularly through payroll deductions. On this point, the President asked only that citizens buy war bonds "with their earnings instead of using those earnings to buy articles which are not essential." There is no evidence yet that the Treasury has succeeded to anything like the extent necessary to close the "inflationary gap." It may succeed, but the prospect still is that its insistence on relying on "voluntary" methods will only delay the adoption of a sound system of compulsory savings.

These four points—price ceilings, rationings, curbs on consumer credit, and war bond buying have been, or are being, put into effect to the extent that they can be by the agencies of the Government.

THERE IS one other point which it is up to the Administrative branch, in the first instance, to translate into action. That is "stabilization of wages." To this point, the approach has been hesitant; although the action, when it is taken, may prove adequate. A fair formula which will have the effect of fixing wage ceilings while permitting some readjustments is not easy to work out. And it has been made no easier by the attitude of the leaders of organized labor. On Wednesday of this week, the C. I. O. executive board adopted a resolution which, by implication, went some way toward accepting wage stabilization. But this acceptance can be found only in omissions from the text of the resolution; not in a forthright declaration of approval.

But there is another factor which is making wage stabilization difficult. That is the failure, to the present, to enact adequate taxation and to apply the farm plank in the President's seven-point program. This failure rests with Congress.

The House Ways and Means Committee has watered down the Treasury's tax program, which in itself revealed little comprehension of the danger of inflation. The Treasury's program did have, however, the merit of applying stringently the principle of "ability to pay." If adopted, its program would have made it easier to turn around and insist that labor and the lower-medium income groups generally pay their share of the taxes and submit without further argument to wartime wage ceilings. The most anti-inflationary feature of the Treasury's plan—to collect a portion of next year's income tax in advance by withholding at the source—was brushed aside as too revolutionary to be considered on short notice. One can only wonder where the Congressmen who make bold to sit on a committee which drafts tax bills have been during the months, and years, that this method of collecting income taxes has been discussed by tax experts and in the press.

The war goes on, production rises, the column of wage payments rises, the supply of consumer goods shrinks. But the President's seven-point program—which was late and probably inadequate when presented—still is not fulfilled. Congress seems never to have heard of "too little and too late."

Popular Election Of Governors In Territories Of U. S. Urged

By the Associated Press

Popular election of Governors in Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, as a step toward local self-government, was urged yesterday by the Foreign Policy Association.

A study prepared for the private research organization by Charles F. Reid, a staff member, declared also that consideration should be given to statehood for these territories.

All now have a measure of self-government but their Governors are appointed by the President of the United States.

Reid's study was a general survey of American overseas areas. He reached the conclusion that the United States was morally bound by its declared war aims to apply the Atlantic Charter to its own territories.

"Today, in our hour of crisis," he said, "we are asking for the loyalty of the people in the outlying territories. We proclaim that we are fighting 'the powers of darkness'—the cult of the 'master race' and the subordination of the individual to a totalitarian state. We say that we mean to establish the 'four freedoms' and the principles of the Atlantic Charter.

"If we win the war and thus are given the chance to win the peace, we must not forget that there are people in our own bailiwick who seek to share in the benefits of a democratic 'new order.' Democracy, they may well say, begins at home."

Reid asserted, however, that this country must not lose sight of the fact that some of the territories might never be self-supporting.

"In Puerto Rico, with its overcrowded population and limited resources, and in the Virgin Islands, also poorly endowed in contrast to other areas nearby, Federal aid must continue to bolster an unstable and ill-balanced economy, charging the cost up against the strategic advantages we gain in these islands," he said.

"New experiments, new attempts at overcoming these economic handicaps, will need to be tried. And in all territories we want to carry on and expand our traditional contributions to health, housing, and education, and a general rise in the standard of living."

D. of C. Will Observe Davis' Anniversary

Exercises, sponsored by the Daughters of the Confederacy, in commemoration of the 134th anniversary of the birth of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy during the Civil War, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Statuary Hall of the Capitol. Mrs. Harold Walbridge Robbins, division president, will have charge of the program, which includes an address by Representative Joseph R. Bryson of South Carolina.

Americans At War

LET THE GENERALS, the admirals and the statesmen say where the enemy is to be met and how that will be done, but any civilian can see that, from a dawdling started fall of 1940, the people of the United States, under a strong Government, have made amazing progress toward the development of the mighty power of this peaceful Nation to make war when provoked. The great South and Southwest is a growing swarm of soldiers. In areas of thousands of miles, warplanes of all the land-based military types, flivvers to enormous bombers, snarl across the sky. Military camps—so many that few of our own people ever heard of them all—have risen in remote places—where there is room to spare for housing and training, and factories for the production of explosives, planes and shells suddenly are where nothing was before. All this is in addition to the driving development which has taken place in the old, established industrial centers of New England and the other Eastern States, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois and the mighty effort in the shipyards.

It is a picture of the United States turned to war almost as wholly as Germany, and as heartening as the quick creation of these soldier cities and aviation centers and the industrial plants to keep them armed and flying is the change in the appearance and bearing, the "morale" of these young men. They have the look of soldiers now, and Hitler himself never saw, even in his personal corps, so aptly named his Black Guards, the equal of the American cavalry soldiers in El Paso.

EIGHTEEN MONTHS ago, 15 months ago, the American soldier was the subject of much maudlin mothering. His officers genUed him, and neither he nor they understood why they were suddenly called away from civil life, for few quite believed that their mission was merely to "train" for a year and then go home, and the international situation of the hour was such that their Government couldn't admit the truth.

They soldiered without rifles and used laundry wagons for tanks and gaspipes mounted on old Buggy wheels for artillery, with a shamefaced sergeant yelling "Wham" to simulate the sound of guns. They were not at war and they had nothing with which to fight a war, and when a filthy sulker at Fort Bragg spat on the floor in barracks and in the mess a young officer was denounced in Congress for persecuting this "boy" with a court-martial.

Since Pearl Harbor, anyway, if not since some time before, there has been no misunderstanding, no underestimating of the reasons why the Army is in the field and growing and, far from impairing the disposition of the soldier, the realization that he is a fighter has made a fighter of him. Meanwhile, his weapons have been coming along, and he sees the vehicles and planes on every hand which assure him that he is not a Boy Scout off camping and making fire by chafing sticks but as much a soldier as the faceless men of Adolf Hitler. The first draftees went to their stations in the mood of the half-hearted Frenchmen, who were only barely willing and not enthusiastic, and, for a long time, drudged at their training with some feeling that their country wouldn't know how to create enough of the tools for a first-class war.

OFFICERS of the Regular Army who soldiered in France hold this Army to be much superior to the A. E. F. in many ways and inferior only in experience to the war-tested troops of that time. Many mistakes of those days have been avoided, and the human relationships between officers and the ranks would scandalize old, retired colonels and brigadiers of a period when the man with a commission needed not only authority to enforce his commands but pomp, rudeness and ceremony to impress the soldier with his superiority. Moreover, this change has been wrought without the use of political commissars or shoofflies to spy on the soldiers and snitch to some secret bureau.

No American Army ever excelled this one in intelligence, fitness and spirit, and Hitler's troops had no more on the ball up to the time when they overwhelmed much weaker forces and became, in a few days, battle-tried veterans.

Fortunately, again, others are holding the line while this country gets ready, but the effort, industrial as well as military, is vastly bigger and better as the whole power of the Nation goes to war. Two years ago Hitler didn't think the United States could do it, and even today most Americans have no idea how mistaken he was.

Submarine Menace

By Mark Sullivan

Must Be Cut Not Countered

ABOUT SHIPS, and the destruction of them by submarines and planes—which remains America's single war problem—three steps emerged this week:

SULLIVAN

An enormous quantity of new cargo ships, 23 million tons, is stated as the expected output of our shipyards by the end of 1943. The expectation is expressed by Admiral Land, in charge of cargo ship construction. His judgment is supported by others well informed. Production of new cargo ships is going ahead with assuring speed and efficiency.

An immense addition to the Navy—500 fighting ships and 800 subordinate craft—is provided by a bill introduced in the House, sponsored by the Naval Affairs Committee.

Newspaper publication by well-informed writers says that the Navy has completed arrangements by which it is expected submarine sinkings off our Atlantic Coast will be checked by the middle of July. The arrangements include a close policing of the waters along our Atlantic Coast, in the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean, by great numbers of patrol boats and other naval and air craft.

THESE ARE important and cheering developments. But, assuming all these things are done, the shipping problem will still remain, still continue to be America's principal single war problem. Even if the waters off our Atlantic Coast are made absolutely safe, even if it becomes impossible for a submarine to attack successfully in these waters—the submarine menace will merely move to some other spot. It will continue as a handicap to our winning the war. Moreover, two of this week's steps—building more cargo ships and more naval vessels—will take time, much time. Meanwhile, by late information, two gaunt facts exist:

One is, Allied cargo ships are being sunk faster than new ones are being built.

The other is, enemy submarines are being built faster than they are being destroyed.

Ways of meeting the submarine menace, effectively, fall into several categories. An obvious one is, build more cargo ships. This is absolutely necessary—but is also the least effective way of overcoming the submarine. It is like growing more corn for the rats to eat. As Mr. Walter Lippmann put it the other day, "there is no use building ships in 60 days for the Germans to sink in 12 minutes."

We build more cargo ships because we must have more. We do not build them for the purpose of overcoming submarine destruction. Overcoming the submarine is a separate problem, to be met in other ways.

One way is to protect the cargo ship by means of escort and patrol craft, naval and air. If the protection is protection only, it is not a complete answer. If the submarines are merely prevented from attacking in certain spots and along certain ocean lanes, they will merely go elsewhere. The submarines which now infest our Atlantic Coast are here largely because they have temporarily left spots near Europe where cargo ships are well protected. This is a world-wide war, and it is impossible to give adequate protection in all seven seas.

IF THE PROTECTING naval and air craft are more than protective, if they are equipped to chase and attack submarines they sight, that is more effective.

This brings us into the area of the sure way to overcome the submarines, which is to seek them out and destroy them. They can be sought in the oceans where they operate. While this is difficult, it has been until recently the only way readily available. It has one advantage, a psychological one. When submarines go out from Germany, and do not return within an expected time, there is a dispiriting effect on the morale of home bases, and the crews of other submarines. Suspense is especially damaging to morale. Such discouragement in German ports, spreading to the people, was a large contribution to the ending of the war in 1918.

But the best of all possible ways of overcoming the submarines is to go to the spots where they are built and launched, and destroy them there. This is becoming more possible. Indeed this is perhaps partially accomplished by the growing ability of the British to attack chosen spots on the Axis coast by air. In proportion as we and Britain become able, by naval or air craft or both, to attack points in Germany and Japan where submarines are launched, the submarine will be overcome. The Germans know this, however, and have made their submarine bases difficult to find and attack.

The futility of trying merely to outdistance the submarine by building more cargo ships is shown by some figures sent me by an associate editor of the Marine Journal. Records after the Great War showed that three German submarines had each sunk over 300,000 tons of shipping. That would be 50 to 60 cargo ships of average size. Obviously, building more ships was not the answer to those submarines—the only answer was to destroy them. Twenty-two other German submarines had each sunk over 100,000 tons of shipping.

Building more cargo ships is a problem standing alone. Overcoming submarines is a problem standing alone.

The Gallup Poll

Majority of Americans Look for Prosperity After the War, Not Depression Period

By George Gallup

By American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 4.—Thurman Arnold, the Assistant Attorney General, is going to like to hear these facts.

He has been saying that after the war this country will have a period of great prosperity, not depression; that production of consumer goods will outstrip anything ever seen before; and that the coming plastics and light metals age will make the steel age and the iron age look pretty small.

A majority of his countrymen with opinions on the subject are inclined to believe Mr. Arnold is right. Perhaps more important is the fact that of all groups in the population the businessmen are the most inclined to agree that there will be prosperity, not depression, after the war. The least inclined to believe it are farmers and people in the lower income levels.

Nobody knows, of course—not even the experts—just what post-war economics will be like. But those who think the country is gloomily resigned to the idea of a depression will want to study the results of the following Institute survey put to a carefully selected cross-section of the country:

"Which do you think the United States will have for the first two or three years after the war—depression or prosperity?"

The vote is:

Depression	43%
Prosperity	45
Undecided	12

If the result is based on those with definite opinions, 49 per cent believe we will have depression as opposed to 51 per cent who believe there will be prosperity.

The majority estimate, even if it is largely based on faith, is important from the point of view of public psychology. Mr. Arnold claims that fear of postwar depression creates a "psychological handicap" in business, and that economic pessimism might make some of the "dismal prophecies" come true.

Yet it is the businessmen throughout the country who are at present the most optimistic, as the following comparison by occupational groups indicates:

	Depression	Prosperity	Undecided
Business and professional	34%	57%	9%
White collar	39	50	11
Workers	42	44	14
Farmers	51	36	13

By income groups the results show that the upper brackets are much more optimistic than the lower. Among the upper group 56 per cent think we will have postwar prosperity; among the middle group, 52 per cent; and among the lower group only 38 per cent.

NLRB Pay Rises Held No Violation

Chairman H. A. Millis of the National Labor Relations Board, said yesterday that reclassifications increasing salaries of some employes of the board's field staff did not violate Congressional mandates.

A House Appropriation Subcommittee had criticized the board's action as a defiance of Congress, which refused last year to approve the reclassification.

Millis said in a statement that the Congressional committee rejecting reclassification had said it would be proper if the employes were under civil service. President Roosevelt, he added, placed them under civil service last December 30.

Special Auto Lights Needed In Blackout

By Harold C. McKinley

Associated Press Staff Writer

Cleveland, June 4.—By their lights, you'll know the kind and size of motor vehicles you pass in the night during blackouts—and how to pass them safely.

If you're a civilian, you'll need a pretty good reason before Civilian Defense officials let you drive at all in blackouts.

In case you are permitted to use your car, a War Department specification tells you how private automobiles—as well as trucks, ambulances, fire and police vehicles, trolleys and buses—should be illuminated to screen them from enemy aircraft and provide maximum highway safety.

Drawn up by Army engineers with the aid of the Office of Defense Transportation, the War Production Board, other Government agencies and electric companies, the rules are expected to be placed in effect soon by the Office of Civilian Defense.

First, you're cautioned to stay in the dark at least five minutes before attempting to drive on blacked-out streets and highways. This is to adapt your eyes to the low level of illumination permitted in blackouts.

One Driving Lamp Needed

You'll have one driving lamp—a ten-candle power bulb with reflector encased in black metal and shaded by a hood and mask. This lamp is about one-fifth the strength of ordinary headlights. It will be placed to the left center of the car, 36 to 55 inches above the road level and far enough forward to prevent reflection of light from any part of the vehicles.

Two small marker lights, placed near the usual front headlights, will define the vehicle's width. Of no help in driving, these bulb lights can be seen by approaching traffic at a distance of 1000 feet.

A combination tail and stop light gives off a faint, red glow visible at 1000 feet while the vehicle is in motion, and an amber glow when it stops. These lights are V-shaped and recessed to obscure them from low-flying planes.

In addition, vehicles must have two or three reflector lights on each side—amber toward the front, red toward the rear.

Requirements are the same for ambulances, police and fire vehicles, streetcars and buses, except that vehicles 80 inches wide must have two tail and stop lights. On ambulances, the small marker or "clearance" lights are white; on other vehicles, amber.

Motorcycles require one running light, one marker light and one tail light, while bicycles, push carts and other human-propelled vehicles require front and rear reflector lights.

It will help, too, if chromium and other shiny surfaces are covered with lustreless paint.

Pedestrians, like motorists, are expected to keep off streets and roads unless they have business there. In that case, they should wear white or reflectorized leggings, or white handkerchiefs tied around their legs, and carry blackout lanterns or flashlights.

Japan Moves North

By Barnet Nover

The Raids On Dutch Harbor

NOVER

Assuming that Japan would not attempt to move in all directions at once, an assumption partly belied by the actual course of the war in the Pacific, some argued that India was next on her list. Others declared that Japan had no choice but to attack Australia in force or at least seek to sever the Australian-American life line. Still others, pointing out that Vladivostok is a pistol pointed at Japan's throat, predicted that the island empire's next offensive would be launched from Korea and Manchuria against Russia's maritime province.

So far Japan has belied all these predictions. India has not been invaded. Nor has Australia, and Japan has so far not followed up the attempt which came a cropper in the Coral Sea to sever the life line to the Antipodes. And all is still quiet on the Manchurian-Siberian frontier.

Instead Japan has launched an all-out effort to knock China out of the war. This has since been supplemented by air activity over the Aleutian Islands.

THERE ARE understandable reasons why, up to the present, no great Japanese offensive has been undertaken from Burma against India, from New Guinea and the Solomons against Australia and from Manchuria against Vladivostok.

So far as India is concerned there is the circumstance that Japan never had very much of a force in Burma—not more than 50,000 men, according to General Stilwell—and while that force was sufficient to enable her to conquer the country it might not be enough to police Burma and invade India as well. Besides, the monsoon season is on and military action is difficult while the rainy season lasts. Last but not least there is the fact to be considered that in the fighting around Ceylon the Japanese air force got a first-class licking.

The case of Australia is not dissimilar. Had the Coral Sea battle gone in favor of Japan she would have been in a position to sever the Australian-American supply line and perhaps effect a landing on the Australian coast. Actually the Japanese fleet was worsted in the Coral Sea and growing United Nations air power in Australia has changed the military balance of power in that sector.

BUT ONE OTHER circumstance may help explain the failure up to now of Japan to move on India or Australia or, for that matter, on Siberia. That is General Doolittle's magnificent raid on Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya last April.

This raid, carried out with consummate skill and with great effectiveness, opened the eyes of the Japanese people to their vulnerability. Despite all the victories they had won, the vast stretch of territory they had acquired Japan had not been made safe. On the contrary the raid on Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya came after the United Nations had been driven out of the entire Southwestern Pacific north of Australia.

THE PRESENT Japanese offensive in Chekiang and Fukien provinces in Eastern China is without doubt motivated in part, by the desire to seize control of bases from which air raids on the Japanese islands and on Japanese communications in the China Sea could be staged. Even if the larger purpose of knocking China out of the war is not achieved, the offensive will have justified itself if as a result the Japanese home islands are made safer against air attack.

But raids on the Japanese islands can also be launched from Siberia, from the Aleutian Islands and from aircraft carriers in the Pacific.

A JAPANESE attack on Siberia can never be dismissed as wholly unlikely. But Japan wants to chose the moment carefully before coming to grips with the Russian bear. An offensive directed against Vladivostok that did not quite come off might be fatal to Japan since Vladivostok would then be turned into a base from which the principal industrial centers of the island empire could be blown to bits.

For the time being the Japanese are waiting to see what Hitler will succeed in doing on the Eastern Front. They are not yet convinced he will so weaken Russia that she will have to withdraw her forces from Siberia to Europe.

In one sense, the raids on Dutch Harbor can be regarded as moves preliminary to that attack on Siberia which the Japanese ultimately hope to carry out, the elimination of a danger point above Japan's flank. But that tells only part of the story.

There is, in addition the desire to retaliate for the attack by American bombers on Japan by an attack on American soil. And there is also the long-range objective of carrying the war to the United States and, in so doing, forcing this country to go on the defensive instead of building up, outside the continent, great bases from which an offensive against Japan can be launched.

It is interesting but not conclusive that the first raids on Dutch Harbor were carried out with an insignificant number of planes. This may only have been because they were not yet prepared to risk much of their air strength on that venture and were thus only feeling out the ground. An attack in force against the Aleutians or the Alaskan mainland is a development we cannot afford to discount at this time.

Singing the Blues

Gas Stations Busy, but Not With Business

One can hear all he wants to listen to at the gasoline filling stations these troubled days and 99 per cent of it would make lyrics for the blues.

The uninhibited attendants gnash their teeth with no preamble; the hopeful paint their buildings, which is supposed to lift the morale even when one doesn't know what he's hoping for. The rest look furtively up and down the street for approaching business, the result of old habit. When The Post went to see how they were faring yesterday one, who had opened his station May 14, wondered if it was all worthwhile, rubbed his A-1 classification and hoped the Army would soon get him.

It's like it was around the livery stables when the automobiles came—only worse, because the stable keeper had taken his first ride in an automobile and knew the horse was up. It's the little flicker of hope in the gloom that upsets the filling station man.

If they build a pipeline and rush the gas in, there still won't be any tires . . . If they find a synthetic rubber quickly and don't bring the gas in, it's something, too . . . When all the automobile parts wear out, that seems to end it, too . . . And if it's a short war . . . or a long war . . .

"Yes, sir," said Romeo Stellabotta of the Naval Service Station at Third and M Streets Southeast, across from the Navy Yard: "I'll take the Army." He opened his place May 14, beating the deadline for new stations by just one day. "With a 2½-cent margin on gas and labor problems, and even when you sell your full quota, you can still hardly make expenses. Yes, I'll take the Army," Stellabotta concluded.

Far across town, C. E. Durns, one man at a four-pump station at 5831 Georgia Avenue, painted the concrete abutment to his tanks, saying "two men used to be here."

Incidentally, no one needs any regular customers any more. When the hose aren't tied around the pumps business comes with familiar and unfamiliar face, Durns said. When there isn't any gas and the hose is tied Durns works on tires or fixes up his place. When there is gas on hand, the rush of business is so good there's no use to pick up a tire or carburetor unless there's lots of help and that's becoming a scarce commodity, too. The situation ties itself into a knot.

"We try to keep them going as best we can," Durns said. "We tell them to watch their tires, keep enough air in them and watch their carburetors. It isn't what it used to be."

Everyone, everywhere visited, said that despite the troubles there's always work to do at a filling station, work of preparing the unending reports and keeping the place presentable for whatever might come or happen.

The college boys who made a fad a few years ago of starting their careers in filling stations have gone, somewhere. Nothing's like it was. An attendant at a far-out Rhode Island Avenue station recalled the time when cleaning up the place and small repair jobs was secondary business. "It's exactly the other way around now," he said. The little jobs of repair that once were hardly wanted are grabbed at now.

Further, many said, the attendant has to assume the professional face of a physician at the bedside of a man with heart trouble. Nearly all motorists now are listening to every offbeat the motor makes and asking the attendant how soon the end will come and what he has to stall it off. The attendant ponders this along with his own thought of how soon his business end will come.

The Cities Service Station at Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest has been open from 12 noon to midnight since rationing began, keeping closed on Mondays. A. F. Wright, attendant, said: "Make more money this way, working 72 hours a week, but the old days were better." The 13 employes of William H. Limerick's station at 4430 Benning Road are getting two days off each week—three days occasionally—at no reduction in pay.

When rationing began he kept open six days a week, closing on Sundays. Then he had to close on Thursdays, too, because he couldn't get enough motor fuel to justify a six-day week. Even on a five-day basis and with a 1500-gallon daily allotment, he ordinarily runs out of gasoline between 3 and 4 p. m.

"I get a lot of cussing out," Limerick said, "but what can you do? Even when we run out early in the day the station stays open until 7 p. m., though there isn't much for the men to do. Yet, you can't dock men with families and who have been with you for years."

Harry Coleman, manager of the Atlantic Garage and Service Station, 712 Ninth Street Northwest, has started a "victory garden" at his station to fill in spare time.

In a triangular-shaped plot—auto driveways are on three sides—Coleman has planted corn and string beans. It's good rich soil, says Coleman, whose garden is more productive than his gasoline pumps.

Preserving Kettle Has New Importance; Secretary Wickard Says it Is Necessary For Homemaker to Conserve Food Supply

NOW is the time that the preserving kettle starts bubbling and continues to bubble as long as there is produce to can. More than ever this year is it important that the homemaker preserve the food supply.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has said that we need more canned and preserved food and that all the food that we can produce and conserve will not be too much.

With the curtailment of the variety anad sizes of commercially canned foods, because of the need of tin and rubber for defense equipment, it behooves the homemaker to preserve the garden freshness of vegetables and the full-flavor of the orchard products.

Free Directions

Canning is not an arduous task if directions of authorities are followed. The United States Bureau of Home Economics has compiled several publications on canning that will be of immeasurable help to the homemaker in her canning. "Home Canning of Fruits, Vegetables and Meats," "Homemade Jellies, Jams and Preserves" and "Homemade Pickles and Relishes" are among those offered. Some of the material is free while a charge of 5 or 10 cents is made for other publications.

Mrs. Alexander H. Kerr, president of the Kerr Glass Manufacturing Corporation, has also offered to give canning information to anyone interested. Twelve lessons in canning may be secured free by writing Kerr Mason Jar Co., 2911 Title Insurance Building, Los Angeles, Calif.

Right now the markets are offering strawberries and blackberries. Next will start the procession of other delightful fruits—raspberries, cherries, grapes, peaches, melons and a host of other fruits that make delicious jellies, jams, fruit butters, conserves and pickles.

Canning Without Sugar

Many women sigh about not having enough sugar. But those sighs are not to be considered with too great sympathy. In World War I many homemakers canned their fruits without sugar when it was not available. Some resourceful cooks are substituting white corn sirup for sugar in the proportion of 1½ cups of corn sirup in place of 1 cup of sugar. Of course, fruits may be canned without sugar or sugar substitutes, by using fruit juice or water for the sirup called for in the recipe. There is no other change, the processing time remains the same.

The Government is asking homemakers to conserve all metal. Screwbands are made of metal so they should be saved and used again. When they are not in use they should be stored away so as not to bend.

The sweetness desired in the finished peaches should govern the sirup used. The following sirups have been found agreeable to the majority of people:

No. 1 Thin Sirup—Use 3 parts of water or fruit juice to 1 part of sugar and bring to a boil.

No. 2 Medium Sirup—Use 2 parts of water or fruit juice to 1 part of sugar and bring to a boil.

No. 3 Heavy Sirup—Use 1 part of water or fruit juice to 1 part of sugar and bring to a boil.

Thin sirup is generally used for small, soft fruits, such as sweet cherries, berries, etc. Medium sirup is generally used for peaches, sour berries, acid fruits, as rhubarb, cherries, gooseberries, etc. Heavy sirup is generally used on larger sour fruits that are desired extra sweet.

Pectin Essential

A fruit must have pectin and acid in proper proportions if it is to be converted into jelly. These proportions change with the maturity of the fruit, both decreasing as the fruit ripens. For the best results use a mixture of slightly underripe and ripe fruit. The underripe fruit furnishes the pectin and acid and the ripe fruit contributes to the color and flavor.

When no pectin-rich fruit is available to use with the fruit lacking in pectin this ingredient may be added in the form of commercial pectin or one prepared in the home. Lemon juice and powdered citric acid may be used if acid is needed.

The following are the recipes developed in the laboratories of the United States Bureau of Home Economics by Mrs. Fanny Walker Yeatman and Miss Mabel C. Steinbarger for strawberry preserves:

The color and flavor of strawberries are easily destroyed by heat. Hence, in making preserves, it is well to cook them only a short time.

Method 1. Select large, firm, tart berries. Wash, drain and remove caps. For each pound of fruit use 1 pound of sugar. Combine fruit and sugar in alternate layers and let stand 8 to 10 hours or over night before cooking. While heating to boiling, stir carefully. Boil rapidly 15 to 20 minutes or until sirup is somewhat thick, taking care to prevent burning. Remove scum. Pour at once into hot sterilized jars and seal.

Method 2. In this method the smaller, less perfect berries are picked out to be used for juice. Crush these berries, then stir them while cooking them for about 3 minutes. Strain. To each pound of choice, prepared berries allow one-fourth cup of this juice and 1 pound of sugar. Add sugar to the juice, stir and heat slowly until sugar is entirely dissolved. Drop berries into sirup, simmer for 3 to 5 mnutes, then boil rapidly for 10 to 15 minutes, or until fruit is somewhat clear. Remove scum. Allow preserves to stand about 8 hours or over night in a glass or porcelain bowl. Fill hot sterilized jars three-fourths full with drained berries, without reheating them. Boil sirup rapidly until fairly thick, or to 221 degrees F. Pour hot sirup over berries and seal.

Method 3, Sun Preserves. Strawberry sun preserves can be made only if there is sufficiently hot sunshine to cause rapid evaporation.

To each pound of choice prepared strawberries allow 1 pound of sugar and 1 teaspoon of lemon juice. Prepare a sirup from strawberry juice and sugar as described under Method 2. Add berries to sirup and simmer for 3 to 5 minutes. Drain berries from sirup and place about an inch apart on shallow enameled pans or china platters. Boil sirup until it is fairly thick; that is, for about 10 minutes, or to 221 degrees F. Remove scum, add lemon juice and pour sirup in a thin layer over berries. Cover with window glass propped up about one-fourth inch from the pans. Place in sun for 2 or 3 days or until sirup has jellied. Take inside at night, and after each day's sunning turn berries over. Without reheating, put preserves into hot sterilized glasses and seal.

Blackberry jam is delicious served on hot biscuits, toast and used as a filling for baked products. It is easy to make. The following are the directions:

Blackberry Jam—Mash berries, cook them in their own juice until they are thoroughly heated, then press them through a sieve to remove the seeds. Measure the pulp and liquid, and for each pint allow one cup of sugar. Add the sugar to the pulp and cook rapidly until thick, stirring frequently. Pack in hot sterilized jars and seal.

Corn Bread Difference

Cooked, diced bacon, put into cornbread or corn stick batter, when baked turns out a quick bread, different and interesting, for any meal. Three slices of bacon will make enough for the average batter recipe.

To Top Flaky Biscuits

The "ripening season" of vegetables and fruits may be prolonged for months through preserving. Jellies, jams and preserves have long been delicious emblems of hospitality. Never a family but would enjoy the months-after remembrance of early summer in the ruby delight of preserved strawberries. Ready-to-use pectins are helpful in making strawberry jelly. It does not matter if the fruit is low in natural pectin, the commercial pectin will jell any fruit with which it is used

If you have some cooked ham left over—about 1¼ cups when ground—try making it into a delicious ham roll. Served hot with horseradish sauce it is food that is sure to come in for seconds. Here is the recipe for making it:

Hot Ham Roll—Mix together 1¼ cups cooked ham (½ pound), with 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 2 tablespoons dry mustard and 1 tablespoon milk. Sift 2 cups sifted flour with 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 4 tablespoons shortening. Add about 2-3 to ¾ cup milk to form soft biscuit dough. Roll dough out into rectangular sheet ¼ inch thick. Spread ham mixture on biscuit dough. Roll jelly-roll fashion and seal edge. Bake on baking sheet in moderately hot oven, 425 degrees, 20 to 25 minutes. Slice and serve hot with horseradish sauce. Yield, 8 servings.

Victory Sauce

Maple syrup with a few chopped, salted pecans or peanuts make a Victory sauce for jellied pudding, cake squares reheated for freshness or a frozen dessert.

La Follette's Charge of 'Chiseling' on Pay Of Service Men Raises Storm in Senate

Deadlocked conferees on the soldier-sailor pay bill were threatened yesterday in the Senate with a motion to take the bill from their charge to force a direct Senate vote on the House increase in basic pay to $50.

Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, charging the bill is being held up in conference "to chisel a few dollars out of the enlisted pay of the men in the services," said he would demand a "discharge" vote in the Senate on Monday unless conferees come back for instructions.

La Follette's speech touched off a lively debate on the pay controversy, with two of the Senate conferees taking sharp issue with La Follette's criticism of their action and the Wisconsin Progressive slapping back.

"Chisel" Is Withdrawn

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, Senate author of the pay measure, protested that the House raise to $50 had "thrown out of kilter" wage increases in each rank worked out in cooperation with the armed branches.

Asking more time for the committee to work out an agreement, Johnson protested La Follette's use of the word "chisel."

"I do say the only reason for holding it up is to try to figure out some sort of a scheme whereby enlisted men will get less money," said La Follette.

"I was unfortunate in using the word 'chisel' and I withdraw it but the effect is just the same."

La Follette also clashed with Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont, another Senate conferee, and refused to be dissuaded by Senate Majority Leader Barkley from moving to discharge the conferees on Monday.

Austin said the conferes had "merely taken a recess" and that charges against them were "untrue." La Follette said he resented being accused of an untruth and continued his attack.

New Conference Sought

Net result was that efforts were being made to arrange another pay conference Monday morning, in time for action in advance of the discharge motion, but some of the conferees were out of town and arrangements were incomplete.

The Senate had approved a basic pay raise to $42 for lowest grades in all of the armed branches, against the present starting pay of $21 for a buck private, $30 after four months and $40 after a year's service. The House raised the starting pay of all to a flat $50.

Senator Barkley meanwhile denied authorship of a proposed conference compromise which would pay enlisted men $42 in cash and the remaining $8 in nonnegotiable bonds. Barkley said he was merely "asked whether the conferees from a parliamentary standpoint could agree on say $42 in cash and $8 in bonds. I simply expressed the opinion that they could do that if they saw fit to do it."

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, a Senate authority on parliamentary law, denied that the conferees had authority to report back a compromise. Clark said that if the Senate conferees could not agree to the House $50 pay schedule it was their duty to report back to the Senate "for instructions."

Senator Johnson of Colorado, Senate sponsor of both the pay bill and the family benefits bill approved by the Senate yesterday, said $42 was agreed to by spokesmen for the armed branches in view of many other benefits provided soldiers. He said the Treasury carries 80 per cent of the cost of their insurance, that the bill provides for longevity pay increases for the first time and 75 per cent of base pay on retirement, in addition to disability benefits now in the law. He pointed to the higher base pay for paratroops and other special services.

Resents Slur on Men

La Follette said that regardless of what the departmental officials wanted, "here's a time I think the civilian arm ought to overrule these brass hats."

"It's being whispered around that you can't trust these men with all of this money, and it makes my blood boil," continued La Follette. "We are willing to trust them when it comes to laying down their lives for their country."

Of the plan to pay part in bonds, he said:

"Put that on the civilians of this country first, put it on the officer personnel first, do not put it on the enlisted men who are already having allotments and allowances taken out of their pay."

Miss Goddard Gets Divorce, Visits D. C.

steps from a plane at Washington National Airport

Paulette Goddard flew in from New York last night—her usual silent self.

A Mexican judge in tumultuous little Ciudad Juarez on the border had declared her a free woman at noon yesterday, but Miss Goddard had just four words to say about it. "I have no statement."

Her Mexican divorce decree, however, had revealed for the first time one of her best guarded publicity secrets. She was married, it now appears, to Charles Chaplin in "the first week of June in 1936 in Canton, China."

Romantic—of course, and good show business. Miss Goddard, however, was positively loquacious in other fields. She arrived in Washington, she said, to appear in an Army air cadet show to be given today or Saturday, she wasn't sure which. While here she will stay with friends—she wouldn't say who.

She had traveled alone, and that was all.

The divorce proceedings were more revealing.

Incompatibility and separation of more than a year were charged by Miss Goddard and denied by Chaplin, though he consented to the decree.

Chaplin first met Miss Goddard in 1933 when she was a chorus girl in the ensemble of Eddie Cantor's movie, "The Kid From Spain." Shortly afterward he began escorting her to public places, and reports of their marriage, or at least betrothal, came recurrently.

3 Are Named To Mental Health Board

The judges of District Court announced yesterday the appointment of three Washington psychiatrists to the Commission on Mental Health to fill vacancies left by one resignation and two enlistments in the Navy.

Three other members of the eight-man board, including Thomas G. Walsh, the one lawyer member, were reappointed for four-year terms.

Dr. Miriam F. Dunn, the first woman ever named to the commission, is formerly of the Henry Phipps psychiatric clinic at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. She lives at 2032 Belmont Road Northwest, where she is in private practice.

Dr. Dunn takes the place of Dr. Roger S. Cohen, who is absent on military leave, and will serve the three remaining years of his term.

Other new appointees are Dr. Isadore Rodis, acting director of the psychiatric department of the Georgetown University School of Medicine, and Dr. Robert T. Morse of the Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, Rockville, Md. Both will serve unfinished terms, Dr. Rodis to take the place of Dr. Antoine Schneider, who resigned, and Dr. Morse to complete one remaining year for Dr. Elmer Klein, who is in the Navy.

Those reappointed were Walsh, Dr. Albert E. Marland and Dr. Hyman D. Shapiro. The terms of Dr. Bernard French, Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt and Dr. Walter Freeman are still running.

The commission was established on June 8, 1938, by a congressional act providing "for insanity proceedings in the District of Columbia."

Los Angeles, June 4 (INS).—Screen Actress Kathryn Grayson today filed suit for divorce from John Shelton, actor, whom she married in Las Vegas, Nev., last July 12. She charged cruelty.

1943 District Bill Faces Committee

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday finished marking up the 1943 District budget bill, and Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming expected to place the record supply measure before the full committee for its decision today.

The subcommittee has been asked to add almost half a million dollars to the appropriation of $56,137,171 approved by the House. The bulk of this came in requests for restoration of House-slashed funds, but a grant of $54,345 to finance the new District Department of Recreation was also asked as an addition to the bill.

Bomb Damages German Shop in Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, June 4 (AP).—A small bomb thrown by unidentified persons smashed the show window of a large electrical supply house operated by the German firm of Siemens-Schuckert tonight on Avenida de Mayo, one of the principal streets of the capital.

Lewis Says Murray Backs Communism

But C. I. O. Chieftain Brands Charges Part of Effort to Break Up Union

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The finish fight between John L. Lewis and Philip Murray for control and direction of the C. I. O. went into a crescendo of name calling yesterday, with Lewis suddenly declaring that the issue in the battle was communism, which he declared Murray was supporting, while Murray retorted that the charge was a "bigoted statement of hatred emanating from a fat man who obviously has pathological tendencies."

The barrage of charges and counter-charges was laid down between the United Mine Workers building, where Lewis operated through a resolution passed by his union policy committee, and the National Press Building, where Murray presided over a special meeting of the C. I. O. executive board.

Charge Voiced for First Time

Lewis, who had hitherto contented himself with charging Murray with an organized campaign of defamation against him and other U. M. W. officials, and with dereliction of duty, made the Communist allegation yesterday for the first time in the year-long under-cover battle.

The resolution adopted by the miners' policy committee said, "The issue at hand is United Mine Workers of America versus communism and its forces designed to overthrow our Government by violence."

It directed the U. M. W. executive board to "demand immediately of Philip Murray, president of C. I. O., that at once he publicly renounce his allegiance to and support of communism, that he discharge from the employment of the C. I. O. those Communists now on the payroll, and that he cease to employ Communists as agents and representatives of the C. I. O."

It added that Murray's failure to comply shall be considered "a full and complete admission upon his part as accepting the principles of communism."

Referring to a statement Murray made Wednesday to the C. I. O. executive group, the resolution declared that Murray had maliciously and falsely defamed Lewis.

Murray's reply took the line that Lewis' resolution was further proof of a determined effort on the latter's part to destroy the C. I. O. and undermine the war effort, according to a spokesman who relayed the proceedings to reporters outside the meeting.

The spokesman quoted Murray as pointing out that Lewis promised the previous day to support President Roosevelt and repudiated it on the next. He warned against those who promise support but with "reservations" about certain of the United Nations, presumably a reference to Lewis' blast at communism, and its Russian origin.

As for the charge that Communists were employed in the C. I. O., Murray declared that he took the Americanism of the staff for granted, inasmuch as Lewis had assured him of it, having hired them in the first instance when Lewis was C. I. O. head.

"Every man on the payroll of the C. I. O. was put there by John L. Lewis," Murray said, "and worked for him for nearly six years."

Murray admitted that Lewis had asked him to discharge certain people on the C. I. O. staff, but added that he had only fired one person, J. Raymon Bell, comptroller of the C. I. O., who is Lewis' brother-in-law.

Foreseeing the probable course of events in the mine workers councils, and interpreting the present attack as a predecessor to further action, Murray asked his audience not to be surprised if they read that he was ousted from the mine workers union on grounds of being a Communist. Last week Murray was fired by Lewis from his position as vice president of the U. M. W.

In a dig at Lewis' social activities, Murray said, "The Nation knows that Philip Murray is not a Communist and that neither he nor any member of his family ever visited the Soviet Embassy or engaged in social powwows with Soviet diplomats."

He also took pains to point out that at the most recent C. I. O. convention, attended by Lewis' brother, A. D. Lewis, and his daughter, Katheryn, neither supported a resolution favoring the policy of President Roosevelt in foreign affairs.

Cites Undenied Charge

Murray also pointed out that among Lewis' denials there was none of the charge Murray made the previous day—that in unauthorized peace negotiations with William Hutchinson of the A. F. L., Lewis had offered to surrender the C. I. O.'s construction workers union, headed by his brother, to the A. F. of L. building trades, as part of the peace arrangement.

Meantime, the C. I. O. yesterday heard representations of officials of the U. M. W. District 50, seeking to free themselves from the Lewis organization and obtain an independent charter. Delegates professing to representing 18,000 members of District 50 charged that they were subjected to dictatorial rule by Lewis and his agents, that they were denied autonomy and taxed without representation in U. M. W. councils.

The executive committee set up a three-man board to consider the technical problems of granting an independent C. I. O. charter to the District 50 claimants.

Bridges at C. I. O. Parley; Silent on Deportation

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Harry Bridges, West Coast longshoremen's leader, was present yesterday at the national meeting of the executive board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, but he referred all questions concerning the recently issued order for his deportation to Australia "to my lawyer."

Coincidentally, Attorney General Francis Biddle, who ordered the deportation, denied a petition on behalf of Bridges for a rehearing of the issues of law and fact that led to the deportation order.

The petition was filed last Monday by Bridges' attorney, Mrs. Carol King, who asked that Biddle personally hear evidence and arguments.

Senate Unit Backs Pay Raise For D. C. Recorder of Deeds

A two-man Senate District Subcommittee yesterday indicated that it would approve a pending bill to raise the pay of the District Recorder of Deeds from $6400 to $8000 a year. The measure still must win the approval of the full committee, however, before it is reported to the Senate.

At a hearing yesterday, the Commissioners registered their opposition to the measure in a letter to the committee, which is made up of Senators Capper (Republican) of Kansas and Hughes (Democrat) of Delaware. They asserted that the Recorder of Deeds office was placed under the Classification Act in 1928, and that any pay raise should come according to the procedures set up by this act.

However Frederick Weaver, representing Recorder William J. Thompkins, urged that since the office is filled by Presidential appointment for an indefinite term, it should not come under the Classification Act.

Only Senate District Committee hearing scheduled for today is the concluding session in a series of hearings on the bill to replace the District Coroner's office with that of a medical examiner. The hearings are being conducted by Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio.

Father of 54

GEORGE ROBINSON

George Robert Robinson, former slave who claimed to have been born 108 years ago in Hanover County, Va., died Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ruth Giles, in Springfield, Va.

Mr. Robinson, who received an old-age pension in Fairfax County since 1939, said that he was married five times and was the father of 54 children, most of whom he outlived.

Born a slave, Mr. Robinson had said that he moved to Louisa County with his master, Hamilton Johnson, when a boy. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was working on a farm owned by John Timlick and was with Timlick and his brother, Edward Timlick, during the first battle of Manassas.

In 1863 he helped to build the breastworks to defend Richmond, he asserted. After the war, he moved to Culpeper with a Dr. Briggs.

The aged man claimed to have hauled stone for the construction of the west wing of the Capitol here, and also to have assisted in reinforcement work on the Washington Monument.

The funeral will take place at 2 p. m. today from Clark's Chapel in Springfield, and burial will be in the Baptist Church Cemetery there.

Funeral Services For D. H. McArthur Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Douglas Haight McArthur, 78, who died Tuesday night at his home, 120 Willow Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. McArthur, a pioneer druggist in the Dakota Territory, served for more than 20 years as a congressional secretary. He retired as secretary to Senator Nye in 1929, after serving in the offices of the late Senator Ladd and Representative Baer, all of North Dakota. He also served as a member of the State Senate of North Dakota and once ran on the Democratic ticket for Governor of the State.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Amelia H. McArthur; a daughter, Mrs. K. Allen Kent, and a son, John B. McArthur.

"Syncopation" Glorifies Jazz at Expense Of Drama, With Chromatics Topping Cast; "India at War" Leads the Supplementaries

IF THE EVOLUTION of modern American music, from Basin Street in 1906 to Park Avenue today, constitutes the sort of early summer "escapist" entertainment a war-worried, theater-going public has been waiting for, "Syncopation" is precisely what the doctor ordered.

The new screen feature at RKO-Keith's Theater embodies enough musical variations of its title to satiate both the nostalgic elders and the jitterbug juveniles who, together, span the dissonant years between the early days of jazz and the present-day prevalence of swing and jive. That it doesn't embody much of anything else will not especially matter to its own particular audience. The tracing of the history of orchestral innovation and the reconstruction of popular musical idiom dominate the picture so completely that its dramatic narrative is largely lost in a staccato succession of events that are only vaguely related except in their musical continuity.

There is, to be sure, a dash of boy-meets-girl, but the love it engenders is more of music than of each other—he a struggling young trumpeter; she a pianist; both rebels and revolutionists in music. There is a faint suggestion of the formula that was begun with "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and perpetuated by Bing Crosby's "Birth of the Blues"—with the drama left out.

The gradual transformation of America's popular musical forms, however, is comprehensively and continuously expounded. In this department, the film pursues a double course. One ramification of the absentee plot traces the career of a colored wizard of the hot trumpet and his orchestra; the other, the parallel climb to the top of the kid from the high school band, who recognized conventional music, played by note, only as a species of artistic imprisonment.

Almost a score of pretentious compositions in the modern mood are employed to give sound body to this anthology of jazz, each played practically in its entirety and leading, finally, to the complex arrangements now featured by such eminent conductors as Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa, Charlie Barnet, Harry James, Jack Jenny, Alvino Rey and Joe Venuti, who comprise the All-American Dance Band that brings the picture to its climax.

What normally would be the central roles are played by Jackie Cooper, as the rebellious Johnny, and Bonita Granville, who invades Chicago with deep-seated enthusiasm for the weird harmonies and rhythms that originated on the waterfronts of her native New Orleans. They both find it a bit difficult to cope with the strangely spotty material with which they have been supplied by Philip Yordan and Frank Cavett in their adaptation of Valentine Davies' story of "The Band Played On." It certainly did! In the two paternal roles, Adolphe Menjou and George Bancroft have nothing to do in the least commensurate with their abilities. Todd Duncan gives a good account of Rex Tearbone, foremost modern syncopationist of his race, and Frank Jenks is an extravagantly comic character as Smiley Jackson, the "impresario," who sees a future for the music out of an aboriginal past. Jessie Grayson does well in the "Mammy" role and the Hall Johnson Choir shares ensemble honors with that illustrious All-American Band.

More About India and the War

In sharp contrast to the odd chromatics of the major feature are the significant revelations of the reaction of India's millions to the threat of attack and invasion, as picturized in the March of Time's "India at War," a sequel to the recent "India in Crisis." Perhaps the most surprising aspect of this release is its disclosure of the extent to which India's fighters already are actively participating in the global conflict on a wide spread of fighting fronts. Heavy emphasis also is laid on the industrial possibilities and their present development in a land of mixed races, religions, ideologies and leaderships. The subject, with all of its ominous implications, is not one to bring great consciousness of aid and comfort to the enemy. Neither is it one to bring complete reassurance to the Allied Nations.

Child Stars Only Yesterday!

BONITA GRANVILLE AND JACKIE COOPER
costarred in the juvenile roles in RKO-Keith's production of "Syncopation," screen feature for the new week at RKO-Keith's Theater. In the more mature assignments are such notables as Adolph Menjou, George Bancroft, Connie Boswell, Mona Barrie, Todd Duncan and others, plus the All-American Dance Band, including Benny Goodman and Gene Krupa

Ancient 'Twin Beds,' Capitol, Still a Sure Cure for Drowsiness

By Mary Harris.

Yesterday's crowd that jammed the Capitol Theater may have come in to get cool. But they certainly remained to laugh their heads off. "Twin Beds," harmlessly naughty saga of hiding in closets and missing clothes, had 'em howling. As the first instalment of "hot weather entertainment" it hit on all cylinders.

Three couples are involved in this mix-up—but only one boudoir. There are George Brent and Joan Bennett whose principal trouble is that Joan is too beautiful. With Mischa Auer and Glenda Farrell the difficulty is with Mischa's emotions and an unspeakable cocktail known as the "Cossack's Kiss." Ernest Truex and Una Merkel just naturally fall into trouble for no reason whatever.

Among the rarer moments of "Twin Beds" is the spectacle of Mischa scouring about in underwear, top hat and an umbrella. Another roaring interval depicts Mischa going to sleep unintentionally in an entirely wrong bed. He can't seem to get the light out, so he just puts up his umbrella and goes bye-bye. And the moment when Mischa, reaching with quivering hands for a pitcher of ice water, sees an imaginary serpent coiling in its depths! From all this you'll gather that Mr. Auer has pretty much the best of it in "Twin Beds." Which is true. But he raises such an amazing amount of diverting gee-whillikins that this should be all right with everybody.

Breezy and Brainless

Speed, if not sense (an inappropriate quality for a summer movie, anyhow), is implicit in every minute of the show. It starts with Brent and Joan Bennett defying convention by marching up to the altar together, instead of in the customary wedding procession. They argue every minute of the way—because Joan has to do some special things for the U. S. O. and hasn't time for a honeymoon. Then you'll see La Bennett looking no end toothsome in uniform, selling kisses for $1000 a piece to help the Army and Navy. Husband Brent admires her patriotism but he has twinges, too.

The situation gets crucial when Mischa Auer, Russian baritone, buys one of these $1000 smacks. His wife, Glenda Farrell, a striking person, who habitually parks her long cigarette holder in her bosom, knows Mischa's inflammability, warns Brent of every step his infatuation will take, from making cheese souffles to singing "Pagliacci." Every time you hear "Pagliacci" it's a signal that something rather awful is about to happen.

Such a bowl of froth as "Twin Beds" doesn't demand any high dramatics. But Joan Bennett and George Brent turn in handsome light comedy chores. That goes, too, for Ernest Truex and Una Merkel, while Glenda Farrell has some big and effective moments. Second to no one though, except, Auer, is Margaret Hamilton, as Norah, a maid whose native temper is none too good and becomes terribly embittered by the apparent insanity of her employers.

Connie Boswell a Stage Hit

The last sequences are a continually mounting melee of jumbles, accidents and suspense. The audience seems to breathe, "What next?" And the next thing that happens is always something worse. But Auer and Truex are extracted from clothes closets and under beds with neatness and dispatch for a hilarious ending.

Connie Boswell holds the audience magnetically in a group of songs that include the rollicking "One Dozen Roses" and a highly dramatic version of "White Cliffs of Dover." The balance of the stage show is highly diverting and ingratiating, too. The Rockettes play at being sailboats. (They're really dressed like sailboats.) The Four Whitson Brothers get a tremendous hand for remarkable acrobatics. Robertson and Martin dance in taps and Jimmie Edmundson talks and writes backward at a rate to make you dizzy.

HEDDA HOPPER

Dressler's Boswell

Hollywood, Calif., June 4.—Frances Marion will write the life story of Marie Dressler for the screen. Frances' own story is really Hollywood's. She first interviewed Marie when she was a stage star, and has more screen credits than any single writer in town. She has two academy award statues for original stories, which she uses as door stops. Her salary was $2500 weekly, but all of a sudden, after a bad picture which wasn't entirely her fault, she stopped writing and took up sculpture. She'll take prizes in that, too.

MARLENE DIETRICH

It was thru Frances' battling ability that Marie Dressler became great on the screen. If Frances hadn't gone to bat for her, you never would have seen her in parts like "Anna Christie." Studios thought she could play nothing but low comedy.

A Dutch comic, working in Amsterdam until one month ago, made his entrance crawling from the wings. "Two years ago I had a car," he explained to the audience, "but then I wasn't allowed to buy gas. John Barrymore's friends always insisted that his custom of reading his movie-lines from a blackboard placed within his range actually was only a pose—that Barrymore, who had memorized all of Shakespeare, easily could remember the script, without having to resort to the prompting of a blackboard . . . That custom of his received much publicity, and throughout his last cycle of films, Barrymore insisted upon that blackboard. When he appeared in "The Great Man Votes," there was a scene in which he was to nod, and say "Yes." Barymore instructed the director, Garson Kanin, to have "Yes" written on the blackboard, where he could see it at the proper time . . . "But it's only one word," Kanin protested. "Just one word. How can you possibly get it wrong? . . . "It's possible," warned Barrymore, "I might say 'No.'"

New Finger Wave Substitutes Thread for Hairpins

By Carolyn Abbott.
The Post Beauty Editor

Hair pins will soon join the limbo of forgotten articles because of curtailment of the War Production Board. But women need not get that harried, far-off look in their eyes, thinking that they will have to give up curls and waves because of the vanishing hairpin.

The Stitch-a-Curl, a new wave-setting technique, is the answer to this war-created shortage. Better curls, deeper waves, no hot hairpins. A needle reminiscent of the ones used by our grandparents to secure the meal and feed bags, and threaded with cord string is used to hold the curls in place until they dry.

The picture above tells the story. String-laced are the ringlets of the girl's hair during the process. But when the hair is thoroughly dried, unlaced, brushed and combed, a delightful coiffure such as Alexis Smith, Warner Brothers' star, is wearing, will result. These are not will-o-the-wisp curls fading with the first breeze, but resilient ones that spring back into place when combed and brushed.

The local beauty salon that has recently introduced this technique recommends the stitch-a-curl method for the career girl, busy homemaker or woman busy with defense work. For further information call National 4200, Extension 259.

How to Care For Tired Feet

When your feet hurt, don't you find that you ache all over? C. B. S. Actress Betty ("Joyce Jordan") Winkler suggests that you try this simple and restful footbath when you come home after endless hours of walking or standing. Put a handful of Epsom salts in hot water and let your fete soak for at least ten minutes, then rinse them in cold water.

The change from one extreme to another is very stimulating. Now, rub them with cologne and pat on dusting powder. You'll feel like a new person again, and can look forward to that date for dancing.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Truthtown notables are responding patriotically to the call of the WAACS. No sooner had recruiting offices opened last week than Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger and Mrs. Abraham Lincoln Van Peyster sent their social secretaries to proffer their services as officers. Their offers were not accepted however as the ladies refused to enter the officers' training camp.

"We feel it would be an utter waste of time for us to go to a training camp," Mrs. Bigwigger told The Torch last night. "We drilled all last winter at Palm Beach with the Ladies' Parachute Patrol, and at our patrol teas we have been addressed by many prominent retired Army officers."

Mrs. Whitherford Schooner went to enlist, and finding she was in for a long wait, sent her butler Tweedleford to stand in line for her. Despite his embarrassment at the snickers and questioning glances of the hordes of women surrounding him, Tweedleford stuck it out, only to have the recruiting officer refuse to consider his mistress' application by proxy.

Mrs. Schooner, enraged at the affront, is understood to be planning a rival organization to the WAACS to be offered by prominent socialites. "It was entirely unreasonable to expect me to stand in line when my arches have been giving me so much trouble," she said last night.

Mrs. Thornberry Flitt, roving socialite, flew in from New Mexico to enlist as a captain or at least a first lieutenant, but changed her mind when she found she would have to be at the officers' training camp through the month of August without leave.

"I have already promised to be at two house parties on Long Island during August," said Mrs. Flitt.

The Pioneers

Not to be stopped in their partying as usual by the gasoline shortage, uppercrusters who had exhausted their gas rations arrived at the Buzzberry Tinkle's formal dinner last night by bus, street car, on horseback and even in a horse-drawn milk wagon.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike McPace rode two of their show horses in from their country estate carrying their evening clothes in packs behind them. Mrs. Bridgeport Billow, attired in a blue sequin gown, came on her son's Shetland pony, the Casimer Chives rode a two-seated bicycle, and the Slinker Hoppings and the Atterbury Husks commandeered a milk wagon.

Mrs. Radcliffe Uppercut who with her husband, (both in full evening regalia) came on a bus, dubbed her ride "quite an adventure." "We saw some very interesting types," she said.

For the benefit of guests whose mode of transportation prevented their coming in formal attire the Tinkles had erected a small summer house on the lawn where changes could be made into formal attire before entering the house.

The Morale Builders

"What's the rush?"

"Oh, I'm on my way to the Neo-Bohemian Art Exhibit."

"I'd forgotten all about that!"

"Well, I simply haven't the time, but I do think it's our duty to keep Neo-Bohemian art alive—just as a matter of morale."

"That's the way I feel about those canary bird concerts. Ornithology must be kept alive."

"Yes, and music. I simply must get to those concerts. But I'm so busy now with this Buck and Wing revival."

"What's that?"

"Oh, we're bringing back Buck and Wing dancing—as a means of escape."

"That sounds perfectly fascinating! I really don't know what's going on I'm so involved with my zinnia flower arrangement contest."

"Oh are you having that this year?"

"My dear, we certainly couldn't afford to let interest in zinnia flower arrangements lapse—at a time like this. We simply must keep beauty alive."

"That's what I say about this Relax and Forget movement the beauty shops are sponsoring. It's really necessary for morale."

"It sounds very sensible."

"It does wonders for the skin. Well, I must rush on——"

"No wait—and have a cocktail."

"But I'm late already."

"I know, but at a time like this you need to look after your own morale."

"We-ll I suppose you're right . . . Make it an Old Fashioned."

2-Yard Dress Is Designed; Only the Slim Can Wear It

By Ida Jean Kain

I HADN'T intended to mention the fabric rationing in connection with your figure again for awhile but I've been shocked into it. The other evening at a fashion show put on by young designers, I saw dresses made from two yards of material and suits made from two and one-half yards.

It almost goes without saying that the models—the designers themselves—were youthfully slim. They couldn't have been anything else and modelled such fabric-saving frocks. Can you imagine anyone with a 30-inch waist and 40-inch hips getting into such closely cut clothes? Why, Dorothy Lamour's sarong isn't much skimpier than that!

Slimming Compulsory

Youth is pretty clear-sighted and the way these designers of the future see it slimming is not just going to be fashionable. It's going to be compulsory. When rationing of the material things doesn't allow for heft, a woman won't stall around about losing her excess poundage.

This may seem a remote possibility. But even if it should not come about, there is no question as to the advantage of curves over bulges. Some of the modelling designers—young as they were—had already acquired the middle-aged spread. And in spite of any mention for top honors as to design and workmanship, they did not get the applause from the audience that greeted the slimmer ones. Clothes not so well made looked better on good figures.

If you want to put some dash into your wardrobe, trim down. Perk up your posture and cut your waistline and hipline down to the dimensions that are proportionately lovely. Given normal weight to start with, you can do this so quickly that you'll see a change for the better from one week to the next.

Roll Away Pounds

Rolling works wonders on both measurements. Sit on the floor tailor-fashion, with legs crossed at ankles, and grasp ankles firmly with both hands. Keep your back straight and hang on to your ankles as you roll backward on the floor. Don't change your position. Give a heave-ho and try to sit up again as you were. As you roll, bring your weight to bear on the bulges—say roll from the right hip diagonally back to rest weight on left shoulder; then roll from right shoulder forward to the left hip. Continue for ten rolls.

Sideward rocking will take the fat pads off and give you a smooth hipline. Lean back on the floor with flexed legs together, feet held clear of the floor, and rock away over on alternate sides. Give yourself a good push each time and roll in the other direction.

Here's one strictly for the waist: Lie on your back on the floor with arms straight out at sides, shoulder level, for leverage. Swing both legs up to a right angle with the trunk and keep them together. Now try to hold that right angle of trunk and thigh and lower legs to floor at right side. Your upper back should remain flat on the floor. The instant it comes off, you're wasting your energy as far as slimming the waist goes. Drop legs to side, rest, swing back up in air, and drop to the other side. That fairly wrenches off the inches.

Make-up Trend For the Street

Make-up tricks the stars use for the screen often start a trend in street makeup. Trend of the moment is away from the heavily rouged mouth. Watching Bonita Granville complete her make-up before appearing on the set of her current picture, "Syncopation," we learned a new trick. Bonita says it is better to rouge the upper lip a bit heavier than the lower—the upper lip being thinner and having a more intricate curve. A lower lip, rouged too heavily, can make the whole mouth look thick and dull.

Woman Asks Advice on Behalf of Younger Sister, Who Is Motherless, Unmarried, Poorly Financed And Expecting the Child of 'No-Account' Soldier

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem concerns my younger sister, who is unmarried and expecting a baby. Our mother is dead and we can expect no help or sympathy from father. He has always been mean and strict and would simply disown my sister if he realized the situation. The man in the case is a soldier; and, in plain words, a no-account. My sister would be very reluctant to marry him, even if he would marry her; and we are doubtful that he would. She is terribly worried and so am I,—not knowing which way to turn.

However, we have heard that there are maternity homes which give shelter to unmarried, expectant mothers,—where a girl can stay and work until her child is born; and where she will be helped to make future plans for herself and the baby. My sister isn't in a position to pay any large sum of money for such care, but she might pay something; and would gladly work for her board-and-keep. All she wants is to have the baby without father or the home-town folks knowing about it. Are there any such homes here? And can you tell us how to gain admittance for her? Any additional suggestions you can make will be appreciated. BIG SISTER.

DEAR B. S.: The Florence Crittenton Home, located at 4750 Reservoir Road Northwest, Washington, D. C., provides sanctuary and pre-natal medical care to unmarried, expectant mothers; and grants them the privilege of staying on there for six months after the baby's birth,—until the mother's health and perspective have been restored, and careful plans made to safeguard the future social welfare of both.

Bring your sister's problem to the attention of Miss Anne Rogers, case worker at the Home—who customarily handles admittance arrangements. You will find her a sympathetic, sensible, friendly person,—a tower of strength in helping you meet the crisis with equable spirit. She may be reached for appointment by telephoning Emerson 1116,—the Social Service Department of the maternity home. It is the policy of the Florence Crittenton Home to do all possible to protect its proteges from public scandal;—and thus, girls who are received there are often aided to keep in contact, by letter, with family and friends "back home" in such a way that none suspects their secret. How Get Divorce Prior to Transfer?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For six years, I have been separated from my husband. Three years ago, I met a man who had, at the time, been separated from his wife for five years. After a year's more or less casual acquaintanceship, we became good friends, and now, after two years' congenial companionship, he has asked me to marry him.

The problem is how to go about getting our divorces. As it happens, both his wife and my husband are agreeable to divorce, providing we pay the costs of the action. However, both of us are employed in Government service, in the same department; and this department is being transferred out of town in the near future. In these circumstances, how can we bring suit for divorce? And how long would the legal action take? Your immediate answer is urgently requested. LISSA.

Court Recesses Late in June

DEAR LISSA: Since the court term recesses here the end of June, not to resume until next October, your respective suits for divorce should be filed at once, along with a petition for immediate hearing—which latter a judge might favorably consider, in view of the special circumstances: i. e., the long-time separation in each case, and the fact that you are about to be deprived of your residential status here, in line of Governmental duty.

If you were to relinquish domicile here, without having obtained a divorce, and settle in another jurisdiction, you would have to wait until you had fulfilled residential requirements exacted by law, before filing suit in the new locality. The period of residence (or of waiting) varies,—and in some jurisdictions might be as much as three years.

According to the divorce laws of the District of Columbia, the five years (and more) voluntary separation in each case affords incontestable ground for divorce, and by virtue of having lived here several years, each of you has a resident's right to file suit for divorce. The residential requirement for such action here is two years under certain conditions of separation, and one year under other conditions.

Thus, in my opinion, it behooves each of you to place your divorce suit in the hands of a first-class lawyer, who will bring the case to the court's attention at once. And I feel sure the considerations of morale involved will move the court to grant you a speedy hearing, if such is compatible with justice to other petitioners. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Remove Fire Hazards in Attic

English women, who have had to cope with incendiary bombs for two years, have a word of advice to their American sisters who may have to face this same devastating weapon. They say that these bombs have brought the attic into sudden prominence. Attic cleanliness is now one of a homemaker's important duties. Fire spreads more rapidly when rubbish is there to feed it—the usual litter of old furniture, trunks, books and magazines.

The first step in preparing the attic for war hazards is to remove everything which would be quick to catch fire, such as papers, clothing bags, cardboard boxes and things of that nature. The papers, magazines and boxes can be sold or donated to war salvage collection agencies which are eager to have them.

When all the unnecessary stuff has been removed, brush down the rafters and walls and give everything that can take it a good soap and water scrubbing. After all the things that must remain in the attic have been cleaned, arrange them in an orderly way, so that in case of emergency you can get at a fire without stumbling. Follow the directions of your local fire wardens with respect to the special equipment for fighting incendiary bombs urged on every household.

Dorothea Drayton Makes Bow To Capital Society at Garden Tea

Event Is Success Despite Refusal of Weather to Cooperate

At the season's first party for a debutante, attractive Dorothea Drayton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles de Vere Drayton, made her bow to society yesterday at a garden tea at the home of her parents. Despite the fact that the weather refused to cooperate—a thunder-shower ran guests indoors midway in the party—the fete was an outstanding one of the season. Carried out with utmost simplicity, it gathered in a large group of guests who, for the most part, had known the debutante since childhood; and informal from first to last, it was in keeping with the type of entertaining that characterizes most of wartime Washington's social calendar.

From 5 until 7 o'clock a steady stream of guests poured through the spacious drawing room of the Drayton home at 2400 Wyoming Avenue, and then went on from there to the garden, where the company lingered until the rains came. "Old Washington"—"the only real Washington," according to one guest—was predominant in the crowd that also included its share of official and diplomatic society.

Blossoms, of every shade and description, sent to the debutante of the day from the many friends of the Drayton family, lined the walls of the drawing room where the debutante received with her father.

"She looks like a picture," observed more than one guest, speaking of Miss Drayton, of course, who wore a becoming bouffant frock of white lace-trimmed marquisette, fashioned with a fitted bodice and covered by a softly draped cape and a billowing skirt. An old-fashioned bouquet, trimmed with starched lace and featuring pink roses, sprigged with lavender blossoms and baby's breath, completed her ensemble.

Mrs. Stone at Tea Table

Assisting the debutante were several of her friends, including Miss Eileen Erwin, who will be feted by her parents on Saturday; Miss Ruth Hurley, Miss Mary Sabine, Miss Carol Franklin, Miss Margaret Hill, the Misses Marian and Louise Hamilton, Miss Hillis Morris, and Miss Cornelia Clapp of Bedford, N. Y.

Among friends Mrs. Drayton had asked to take turns at the tea table were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, Mrs. James H. Patten, Mrs. Elmer R. Oliver, Mrs. Ernest I. Lewis, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Frederick S. Dickson, Mrs. John L. Proctor, Mrs. George E. Hamilton, Mrs. Grant Rafter, Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann, Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Miss Anna Green, Mrs. Robert C. Watson, Mrs. John Hyde, Miss Anne Lomax, Mrs. Gregory Prince and Mrs. Edgar Edmonston of Baltimore who, like many others in the list, also assisted at the garden tea a few seasons ago when Dorothea's sister, Betty, made her bow to society. Scheduled to be graduated at Smith College tomorrow, Betty could not be here for the debut yesterday.

Following the tea, Miss Drayton was guest of honor at a dinner given by Miss Marian Hamilton at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hamilton at 2330 Wyoming Avenue.

The debutante, who has been attending Mount Vernon Seminary, decided last year when many of her friends were making their bows that she would wait until spring. With the exception of Miss Louise Hamilton, all the girls who assisted yesterday were debutantes last year.

MISS DOROTHEA DRAYTON

Tabouis Says "Thursday Is 'Tabouis Day'"

Yesterday, like all Thursdays, was "Tabouis Day in Washington."

For Thursday is the day that the famed French journalist, Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, devotes to gleaning information in the Capital. Making her headquarters in New York, the author of "They Called Me Cassandra" is director of the Free French weekly, Pour La Victoire, and it is for her political column in that paper that she spends one day a week here talking, listening and learning.

"Tabouis Day," as the chic Parisienne herself describes it, is 23 working hours long. While sitting in the Mayflower lobby yesterday waiting for an appointment she gave a graphic description of her weekly stint here. Sans gestures, sound effects and the inevitable nontranslatable French phrase, her account went something like this:

"After answering a call for 4:30 a. m. at my hotel in New York I go to the airport and catch a plane for Washington. At 7:30 I am here and my friends' phones start ringing. They wake up, yawn and say 'That Tabouis!' I say, 'Today I want to see So-and-So and Such-and-Such and So-and-So.' They say they will see what they can do, and yawn some more.

"After I see the people I go into some ladies' room with my little suitcase. When I come out I am in dinner dress, ready for my lecture or whaever it is that evening. I take the last plane back to New York and get home at 3:30 in the morning."

Quite a weekly day, even for anyone as energetic as much-accoladed Mme. Tabouis. But air travel restrictions are beginning to upset this tried and true schedule. Frequently it is necessary for her to leave earlier so that she can catch a train instead of a plane. But it will take more than that minor inconvenience to daunt the frail, white-haired woman whose snapping blue eyes not only saw France fall but foresaw the catastrophe years before it happened.

Party Today At Legation

The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Troncoso will entertain at cocktails this afternoon between 6 and 8 o'clock in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver P. Newman. The party will be at the legation, 2101 Connecticut Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Newman, whose home is in Trujillo City, are spending about a week at the Mayflower Hotel.

Manuel Quezon Leases Belmont Hurley Home

Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth has leased the home of the United States Minister to New Zealand, Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley and Mrs. Hurley. President Quezon and his family will move in soon, to remain for the duration. The Hurley estate, Belmont, is just outside of Leesburg, Va.

Meanwhile Mrs. Hurley and her family are now in Chattanooga, Tenn., where Mrs. Hurley will make her debut as a speaker today when she addresses the wives of the Tennessee State Bar Association at a luncheon. Following the luncheon Mrs. Hurley and her family will go on to New Mexico, where they always spend the summer at their home there. Mrs. Hurley, who moved back to town some time ago from Belmont, has been occupying the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, whose husband, Captain Gwynn is now on duty in parts unknown.

Dinner for Kathleen Bell

The Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Daniel W. Bell invited a group of their daughter's friends in last evening for dinner to greet her on her arrival from Smith College. Their daughter, Kathleen, has just completed her sophomore year there.

Among the guests at the Bell home on Gramercy Street were Miss Louise McNutt, Miss Catherine Compton, Miss Jean Willett, Miss Mary Brookings and Miss Marilyn Lahmer of St. Louis, and Miss Mary Darby of Bronxville, house guests of the hosts; Lieut. Frank Oliver, Lieut. Reginald Grady, Lieut. James Via and several others.

Party Planned For Mrs. Rohde

Mrs. Boerge Rohde, the former Ruth Bryan Owen will be the guest of honor at a 4-to-7 party on Sunday, given by Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Armstrong, jr., and Miss Lucile Furman at 513 Goddard Road in Bethesda.

Invitations to the event have been issued in the form of verse, with directions for those who must travel by bus due to gas rationing as well as instructions for those fortunate enough to have sufficient gas for Sunday motoring.

Dr. Parra Perez Honored at Two Parties

Inaugurating his first strenuous social day in Washington, the visiting Minister of Foreign Affairs of Venezuela, Dr. Caracciolo Parra Perez, took over the spotlight at a luncheon at the Pan American Union yesterday and last night was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, at his home in Oxon Hill, Md.

A special meeting of the governing board of the Pan American Union was called before the luncheon in the Hall of the Heroes, when the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, addressed the meeting. Dr. Parra Perez also spoke to the gathering.

In the group were the members of the foreign minister's party who included Dr. Rodolfo Rojas, the Minister of Agriculture; Dr. Enrique Gil Fortoul, the Director General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Jose Joaquin Gonzalez, the President of the Commission of Control; Antonio Davila, Julio Alfredo de la Rosa and Manuel Perez Guerrero.

Members of the governing board at the fete were the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull; the Ambassador of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante; the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Argentina, Felipe A. Espil; the Mexican Ambassador, Francisco Castillo Najera; the Ecuadorean Ambassador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Brazilian Ambassador, Dr. Carlos Martins; the Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; the Chilean Ambassador, Rodolfo Michels; the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Aurelio F. Concheso; the Ambassador of Uruguay, Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco; the Ambassador of Panama, Dr. Ernesto Jaen Guardia; the Bolivian Ambassador, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla; the Ambassador of Paraguay, Dr. Celso R. Velazquez; the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos; the Minister of El Salvador, Dr. Hector David Castro; the Minister of Nicaragua, Dr. Leon DeBayle; the Minister of Honduras, Dr. Julian R. Caceres; the Costa Rican Minister, Dr. Luis Fernandez; the Haitian Minister, Fernand Dennis, and the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Dr. J. M. Troncoso.

Others at the luncheon were Arturo Lares, Counselor of the Venezuelan Embassy; Capt. George T. Summerlin, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Dr. Pedro de Alba and Dr. William Manger.

Dr. Warren Cole Honored at Party

Veering from the usual procedure, a prenuptial party feted the prospective bridegroom, instead of the bride-elect, when Duncan Brooks entertained last night in honor of Dr. Warren Cole, who will marry Miss Ruth Warren tomorrow. Mr. Brooks will be best man when Dr. Cole and Miss Warren walk down that well-known aisle at All Souls' Memorial Church.

Guests who gathered at the Brooks' home in Bethesda were James H. Littlepage and Jack Perry, who have come from out of town to act as ushers for the wedding; Stewart Dickson, George W. Stone, James H. Gough, Robert Warren, uncle of tomorrow's bride, and Norman L. Goldman.

Hortense Prince Terry Is Bride Of Frederick Foulke Spencer

MRS. FREDERICK FOULKE SPENCER, JR.

In the Cleveland Park Congregational Church yesterday Miss Hortense Prince Terry, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Spencer Baldwin Terry of Washington and Orient, Long Island, became the bride of Frederick Foulke Spencer, jr., son of Mrs. Lawrence S. Barlow of Coral Gables, Fla., and Westbrook, Conn.

The candlelight ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. Paul Yinger before an altar banked with palms and baskets of white gladioli and peonies.

Colonel Terry gave his daughter in marriage. Her bridal costume was of white satin cut on princess lines with full circular train and she wore a veil of lace attached to a Juliet cap of seed pearls and carried a bouquet of white orchids, gladioli and stephanotis.

Miss Hope S. Terry was her sister's maid of honor and wore a frock of white faille with a bouquet of pink larkspur and blue delphinium tied with blue ribbons. Another sister, Miss Constance Jane Terry, the only other attendant, was attired in a similar ensemble. Stanley S. Raymond of Stamford, Conn., was the best man and ushers included Lawrence Leeby and Thomas Dawson.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at 3500 Thirty-fifth Street. After a wedding trip the couple will make their home in Hartford, Conn. The bride attended the MacDuffie School for girls in Springfield, Mass., and Mr. Spencer graduated from Staunton Military Academy.

Among the out-of-town guests here for the wedding were the bridegroom's aunt, the Baroness von Wasseley of Coral Gables; Mrs. Thomas Dawson of Atlanta; Mrs. Stanley Raymond of Stamford, and Miss Miriam Gates of Newport, R. I.

Chilean Envoy Confers Medal On W. E. Knox

"I fastened the medal," replied pretty Senorita Cristina Michels in answer to a question as to what part she played in the ceremonies at the Chilean Embassy yesterday afternoon when her father, the Chilean Ambassador, Rodolgo Michels, conferred the Order Al Merito of Chile on William Edward Knox.

A large group of Chileans came in to watch the ceremonies and stayed for the party that followed as did a number of Government officials with Latin-American connections. Mr. Knox, who with his attractive wife came down from Syracuse, N. Y., for the presentation, was decorated as a result of his work in establishing a number of power plants in Chile. About a dozen men who worked with him on these projects accompanied him down from Syracuse yesterday and returned with him and his wife last night.

Mrs. Knox, who was quite a center of attention in the male-dominated assemblage, keyed her costume to the south-of-the-border atmosphere. Her black sheer frock boasted a rhumba skirt of lace tiers and was set off with a corsage tucked in her belt and a filagree picture hat. Senorita Michels, who is acting as her father's hostess during her mother's visit in her native land, had chosen a gay dress of multi-colored print.

Laurence Duggan, the political advisor to the Secretary of State, constantly had a group around him. Many were congratulating him on the two-week old addition to the Duggan household—a boy named Larry, whose family middle name keeps him from being a junior. Nelson Rockefeller was in the group as were Warren Lee Pierson, Carlos Davila, Dr. Tomas Cajigas, Abelardo Silva, George Abell and a number of others.

The Chilean staff was there en masse as were the military, naval and air delegations from that nation. Invited for 5:30 guests were streaming in long after that and looked as if they intended to remain for some time at the pleasant party.

Donelson-Gardner Rites Take Place At Temple Church

Into town, also, and out again with a bride—all within the space of a few hours yesterday—so goes the "wedding-in-wartime" story of Kenneth William Donelson and Miss Phyllis Rosemary Gardner.

The Rev. Thomas E. Boorde officiated for the 7:30 o'clock vows at Temple Baptist Church, and the bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Philip Steele. She is the daughter of Mrs. Arthur Noyes Gardner of Washington.

The bride's gown was of white organdy with a printed design of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her veil fell from a coronet of duchess lace and orange blossoms, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and baby's breath. Maid of honor and only attendant of the bride was Miss Marinelle Bray, whose dress was of blue silk jersey with gaily flowered organdy over blue taffeta. Yellow roses, daisies and baby's breath made up her bouquet.

Ralph E. West, U. S. N., was best man for Mr. Donelson, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Donelson of Broken Bow, Nebr. Ushers were Clifford Thurman, James Mullings, Charles Bray and Earl Ullman. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's mother. The bridegroom has been stationed with the Army at Camp Lee, Va., and the couple are motoring through Virginia for their wedding trip. Mr. Donelson will enter Officers' Training School at Camp Lee. Mrs. Donelson attended the Women's College of Delaware. Her husband studied at Grand Island Business College of Nebraska.

Mrs. Harry Jordan Visiting Here

Mrs. Harry Jordan of Philadelphia, arrived yesterday to be the guest of Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin at their Shoreham apartment.

With Mrs. Goodwin and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, she will occupy the Goodwin box on Saturday at the British Ambulance Show.

Miss Sharpless Is Married

In a quiet 7 o'clock ceremony yesterday at the home of her father, Howard Sharpless, Miss Marie Agnes Sharpless became the bride of John Klossner, of Fort Wayne, Ind., son of Walter Klossner and the late Mrs. Klossner.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of velvaray over satin, designed with sweetheart neckline trimmed in seed pearls and a finger-tip veil held with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a prayerbook belonging to her mother, the late Mrs. Sharpless, and a bouquet of white orchids and sweet peas.

Miss Isabelle Hewlett, the maid of honor, wore a blue organza gown and carried sweetheart roses. Richard Dom of Fort Wayne was the best man.

Mrs. Bell Gives Luncheon for Mrs. H. T. Frost

With informality the keynote, Mrs. Golden Bell entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham to give some of her Washington friends an opportunity to meet Mrs. H. Talfour Frost of Chicago.

Mrs. Frost has recently returned from the Far East with her architect-husband, who had been in Manila drawing plans for a new Philippine capital. During the luncheon, Philippine President Manuel Quezon came in with a party and sat down at a nearby table. Washington was just proving again that it was a reunion city, for Mrs. Bell had lived in Manila for some time while her husband served as financial advisor to the High Commissioner.

Among the guests were Mrs. Richard K. Sutherland, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mme. Yu, wife of the Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Katherine Frost, Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. William Levis, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Frank Wideman, Mrs. Seiforde Stellwagen, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Robert Carswell, Mrs. Ned Schefer, Mrs. Edward McCammon, Mrs. F. Clinton Stephens, Mrs. N. A. Townsend, Mrs. William Disque and Miss Jane Wyatt.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan gathered in a few friends for a late afternoon fete in celebration of their wedding anniversary. The event took place in their apartment at the Shoreham.

James H. R. Cromwell was the guest in whose honor his sister, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, entertained at a small mint julep party yesterday afternoon. The informal gathering was by way of being a double celebration, or in addition to being a birthday fete, it was also Mrs. Atwill's first fete since she recently moved back into her house at 1400 Thirty-fourth Street.

Henry F. Grady, who recently returned from a special Government mission to India, will be the guest of honor at an "after 9 o'clock" party to be given this evening by Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover.

Miss Elizabeth Howry will entertain at a buffet supper this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Hepburn have returned from Miami, where they went on their wedding trip, and are now making their home in Alexandria. Mrs. Hepburn is the former Miss Evelyn Lynn Alexander and she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Alexander of Washington. The wedding took place in Alexandria on May 22.

Mrs. Fred L. Southgate entertained yesterday at a luncheon, followed by bridge, at her home in Takoma Park, Md. Her guests were Mrs. Maude Irick, Mrs. Frank St. George, Mrs. Stephen Cassola, Mrs. Fred Kirton, Mrs. Louise Koshmeader, Mrs. William Williams and Mrs. Charles MacLeod.

Mrs. Leroy King has joined her mother, Mrs. David Kaufman, in Newton, Mass., and they are now visiting Mr. and Mrs. Louis Glaser.

Astrologer, Student of Nostradamus To Open Classes Here for Those Interested in Seer's War Prophecies

By Genevieve Reynolds

WHAT WITH the rumors and secrecy that surround war news, about the only way to get the real lowdown is to consult the stars. So, if you're a believer in astrology and know how to compute the signs scientifically—the answers are there.

Astrologically speaking, World War II will end in 1943—perhaps sooner. The last battle will terminate abruptly. These are the predictions of Andre Lamont, author of "Nostradamus Sees All," the popular book about the prophecies of the famous sixteenth century astrologer.

Next month you can expect the United States to make a completely devastating raid on Japan. And don't be too surprised if Canada and Alaska are invaded this summer. Both are in the trouble action zones, according to Mr. Lamont.

The West Coast is in for some bombing, but he doesn't see Washington or New York in the bombing area at present. Mr. Lamont—that's the Armenian-born astrologer's pseudonym—bases his prophecies on those of Nostradamus and the Pyramids. At present he's working on a prospective book interpreting the prophecies of the latter.

A firm believer in Nostradamus' prophecies, Mr. Lamont proposes to organize a club for the students seriously interested in the seer. The purpose is to bring together those interested in studying the prophecies of Nostradamus concerning the present World War, the United States' role and that of the world in general.

Mr. Lamont said: "I'll pick the club members. No quacks are wanted. Only unemotional, scientifically minded students will be encouraged."

A letter to Mr. Lamont, 2525 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, stating reasons why you're interested in joining such a club may do the admission trick.

THAT—Christine Sadler was elected without opposition to the presidency of the Women's National Press Club at a business meeting this week.

Christine Sadler

Other officers elected for the ensuing year include: Betty Hynes, first vice president; Lily Lykes Shepard, second vice president; Virginia Mannon, recording secretary; Estelle Welsh, corresponding secretary; Katharine McKiever, treasurer. Those named to the board are Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, Katherine Lewis and Anne Wheaton.

THAT—Mrs. Robert D. Heinl, jr., will give an informal lecture on plane spotting before members of the American Women's Voluntary Services, Wednesday, June 10, 2:30 p. m. at A. W. V. S. headquarters, 2170 Florida Avenue. If a sufficient number of members are interested, the A. W. V. S. will set up a course in plane spotting.

THAT—a small party was given for Alice Eversman, newly elected president of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington, at the clubhouse this week. Also she already has selected committees for the ensuing year. Teresa Milton heads the entertainment committee, with Katharine Brooke, Helen Essary, Elizabeth Kee and Flora Macdonald Joslin as assistants.

Marie Sauer is the new membership committee chairman. Her assistants include Mary MacCracken Jones and Helene Kravadze. Publicity chairman is Elizabeth Ford and Helen Vogt, the assistant. Leila Bathon heads the garden committee—Margaret Hart, the house committee and Louise Hartley, library committee.

THAT—The D. C. League of Republican Women is planning to keep open house during the summer. Red Cross activities will hum at top speed. Also, the league is flinging a gala card and garden party, Friday afternoon, June 12, at the home of Senator James J. Davis, 3012 Massachusetts Avenue. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the league, has selected Mrs. Edmund S. Kochersperger as general chairman of the event. Congressional wives—by the dozens—will be on hand at the party.

Mrs. Everett E. Gann

THAT—The Board of the Woman's Clinic is holding its spring card party tonight at the Roosevelt Hotel. Mrs. Adele Abbott and Mrs. Calvin Lucas are chairman and co-chairman, respectively. They will be assisted by the president of the clinic, Mrs. Roselia B. Shaw; Mrs. Frank J. Mann, first vice president; Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, treasurer; Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, secretary, and Mrs. Elizabeth W. Enterline, director to the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Woman's Clinic, located at 4704 Georgia Avenue, carries on an outstanding bit of philanthropic work.

Trinity College Alumnae

AT THE final meeting of the 1941-42 season held at Trinity College, the Washington Chapter of the alumnae voted funds to almost complete payment on the bacteriology laboratory equipped by the chapter. Miss Mary Guerin, local chairman of the jubilee fund, announced the District chapter to be leading the other chapters throughout the country in the drive for the science building.

Georgetown Visitation Alumnae Greet Old Friends at Banquet

SEVENTY former pupils of historic Georgetown Visitation Convent, members of the alumnae association, forgot the war, civilian defense, gas and sugar rationing Wednesday night at their annual alumnae banquet at the Sulgrave Club. Old scholars of Georgetown, many of whom had come to see daughters, granddaughters or other members of their families graduate from the convent in the afternoon, gathered at the Sulgrave Club and renewed friendships with former classmates.

Mrs. Edward Keating, president of the Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae Association, presided. Miss Mary Lee Goddard of Washington, honorary president of the alumnae, the third generation of her family to attend Georgetown, was the guest of honor.

The tables were decorated in flowers of yellow and white, the school colors, and arranged in a horseshoe curve. With Mrs. Keating at the center table were members of the classes between 1894 and 1917, including Mrs. Margaret D. Moran, Mrs. Arthur N. Hacker, Miss Borredell Gower, Mrs. Henry Barbour of Philadelphia, Miss Agnes Feely, Miss Rose Shea, Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, Mrs. J. D. Rucker of Grosse Point, Mich.; Mrs. E. P. Hammond of Detroit, Mrs. Hamilton Carhartt, jr., Irvine, Ky.; Miss Christobel Hill, Miss Ellen T. Keane, Mrs. John Edgar Murdock, Mrs. Clare McGrath Fitzgerald, Mrs. Edelin Wilson, Miss Alma M. Geist.

Members of the class of 1917, who were celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary, were placed at a smaller table in the middle of the room. Among this group were Mrs. Thomas Prendergast, Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Howard A. Vilsak of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. Elizabeth Koons Heinus, Miss Mary Regina Kana.

Also honored were members of the Classes of 1892, 1897, 1902, 1912, 1922, 1927, 1932 and 1937 who are celebrating reunions today at the convent at a luncheon given by the Sisters of the Visitation each year for the alumnae.

Among the many guests from out of town were: Miss Mary P. Berry of New London, Conn., Mrs. Arthur S. Bush of Detroit, Mrs. James A. Craig, Santa Barbara, Calif.; Mrs. William J. Fitzgerald, Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. G. C. Gerling, Rochester, Minn.; Mrs. M. Kane Welch, Chicago; Mrs. Frank Plant, Minneapolis; Miss Margaret D. Moran, Chicago; Miss Catherine Nolan, Reading; Miss Carole V. Riley, Cleveland; Mrs. J. Deane Rucker, Grosse Point; Miss Elizabeth Tanyon of New York, Mrs. Frederick Stohlman, Chevy Chase, Md.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

How Can U. S. Workers' Salaries Be Raised?

Congress is willing and ready to increase the incomes of the low-salaried Federal workers to help them offset increased living costs. That's now taken for granted. But how? That's the complex question that's giving members of the House Civil Service Committee a splitting headache. It's becoming increasingly clear to committee members that neither the Administration's overtime bill or the $300 bonus bill is the right answer and some insiders now believe that the committee will eventually report a combination of the two.

The best suggestion made in three days of hearings came from plain-speaking Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher, chief of Navy's shore establishments, who proposed that Congress repeal all laws governing salaries and start over again. The overtime bill, the admiral said, had a very laudable purpose, but he insisted it wasn't a complete solution, as it would correct some injustices and perpetuate others. Under the overtime bill, he explained, a master mechanic, whose base salary of $4100 is fixed by the wage board, would be paid $5424, more than $1300 in overtime, for a year's work on a 48-hour week. A draftsman or engineer whose base salary is $4600 and who works along side of the master mechanic wouldn't be paid any overtime under the Administration's bill.

The real sore spot is the fact that Navy's architects, engineers, draftsmen and the like are now paid time and a half. They wouldn't continue to be under the overtime bill, as the ceiling is $3800. Personnel Director Charles Piozet told the committee that a "handful" of employes paid $6000 and $8000 are paid overtime now. Of the 450,000 Navy employes all but 14,000—and all of those are right here in Washington—are paid overtime. Imagine that—Navy employes in cities throughout the country where the cost of living is way below that of Washington are paid overtime.

Admiral Fisher Says:

About the 14,000 clerical employes here who are the victims of rank discrimination, Admiral Fisher had this to say: "They have patiently stood the gaff, taken the injustices, and have worked long hours. That is a credit to them." Piozet, who was warmly congratulated on his service to the Government by Chairman Robert Ramspeck, testified that none of the 14,000 had complained to him about the injustice. However, the employes have a champion in Secretary Knox and other officials who have been trying to get Congress to extend overtime to the remaining 14,000 for two years.

In War, the situation is even worse. Personnel Director William H. Kushnick approved the Administration bill without qualification. It would cure most of his troubles. The department has 675,000 employes, of whom 530,000 get overtime and 145,000 don't, though they all must work a minimum of 48 hours. Unlike Navy, War can't pay a single department worker here overtime. Field employes here—and there are thousands of them—are paid overtime. For example, employes in the engineer's field office here are paid overtime. At the engineer's headquarters, employes aren't. It simply doesn't make sense. William C. Hushing, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, urged the committee to approve the $300 bonus bill. Representative Howard Smith of Virginia, made a plea for increased earning for the low-paid workers but doubted whether the Administration's overtime bill was sufficient to cover the need. He suggested that the committee report out a bill where all employes would benefit.

War Production Board has ordered Agricultural Marketing Administration to purchase the Government's requirements for canned fish. This action indicates that food control will be centered in Agriculture. Secretary Wickard is expected to be appointed chairman of a war food board . . . Claire G. Callaghan has been granted leave from the Forest Service to teach college boys how to fly under the CAA program . . . Dr. L. A. Hawkins has been retired from Agriculture after 35 years of service. He was in charge of the Division of Control Investigations in the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. C. P. Clausen will take over his work . . . Reginald S. Dean has been appointed chief of the Metallurgical Division at the Bureau of Mines.

Wife Offers Recruit

Columbia, S. C.—"Please take my husband into the service. He wants to fight all the time and I am not able to . . ."

Richland County Selective Service Board, No. 68, recipient of the plea, immediately began a review of the husband's case.

Calling the Turn

Representative Nichols (Democrat) of Oklahoma, was telling House Speaker Rayburn about his recent 9000-mile air tour of Alaska. He was saying that in a Decoration Day speech back home he told his constituents that Japanese bombing of Dutch Harbor was a distinct possibility. This conversation took place about an hour before the Navy announced Dutch Harbor had been bombed.

Identical Measures To Unify District Setup Presented In Both Houses

Bills authorizing the District Commissioners to set up a uniform District housing code, regulating the use, occupancy, sanitary conditions and safety of Washington dwellings, were introduced in the Senate and House yesterday by Senator McCarran and Representative Randolph, chairmen of the two District Committees.

The two identical measures would prepare the way for a coordination of inspection work, which is now handled by five different local agencies, under the authority of the Health Department. Activities of the Zoning and Rent Commissions also would be brought under such a code.

A proposed draft of a housing code has already been submitted to the Commissioners by the Washington Building Congress. Based on the proven features of codes now in service in other cities, it was written by George W. Thompson of the United States Bureau of Standards.

Early hearings on the proposed legislation were promised by both District committee heads, Randolph declaring that the bill "appropriately focuses attention on a most important problem in wartime Washington."

The bill itself orders the Commissioners to draw up a housing code providing necesary regulations and standards for the protection of health and safety. Administration and enforcement of the regulations are delegated to the Health Officer.

It further provides for Police Court prosecutions of violators, under the direction of the Corporation Counsel, and in cases of convictions authorizes a maximum fine of $25 for each day the violation continues. A third conviction within a five-year period would make the violator liable to a maximum 60-day jail sentence, or a fine or both.

Drafted by Sefton Darr and Laurence Schmeckebier, directors of the Washington Housing Association, the bill was presented to Randolph and McCarran by J. Bernard Wyckoff, president of the association, and Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, a director.

Wyckoff declared that rooming house operation in Washington is now a "big business," grossing more than a million dollars a month, which "should be regulated, inspected and licensed by one agency instead of seven."

The agencies whose housing-related work would be centered under the Health Department include the Building, Health, Plumbing, Electrical, Zoning and Rent Control Commissions.

Students Stage Operetta

Many Offer Services in Nurse Dearth

Women Respond To Plea for Aid; Mason Meets With Hospital Heads

An encouraging response to an appeal for relief of Washington's shortage of nurses was reported yesterday by Miss Edith Beattie, executive secretary of the Graduate Nurses Association.

In the wake of a news story on the situation which appeared yesterday in The Post, Miss Beattie said:

Four graduate nurses, now inactive, came to association headquarters at 1746 K Street Northwest and said they are available for duty.

"A great many" women volunteered for training and services as nurses' aides in hospitals.

Four June high school graduates obtained information on nurses' training.

Commissioner Guy Mason has called a special meeting for 2:30 p. m. today in his office of superintendents of all District hospitals, military excepted, to discuss the serious nursing shortage and work out a remedy.

Victory Sidelights

Sector Wardens Win Praise Of Capitals' New Air Raid Chief

The sector warden and assistant sector warden last night came in for a pat on the back from their chief, William J. Mileham, who called them the most important cogs in the entire civilian defense setup.

Once the bombs start falling, the resulting damage, chaos, and whatnot, is "their baby," he told a mass meeting of residents of Zone 14, midcity defense area, held in the school auditorium of the Church of Immaculate Conception, Eighth and N Streets Northwest.

Mileham, in his first public speech since being appointed chief air-raid warden, expressed certainty that Washington would be bombed—as a "face saving" gesture on the part of the Axis, if nothing else.

When the time comes, he said, Washington can't depend on the armed forces, whose proper place is at the battlefront. It'll be strictly a matter for civilians, and on how well they organize now depends the manner in which the District will come through its first aerial assault, he declared.

There were several other speakers at last night's meeting, including A. J. Driscoll, president of the Mid-City Citizens Association; John L. C. Sullivan, who succeeded Mileham as deputy warden for the midcity area, and J. P. Scott, warden for Zone 14. In addition, several films relating to civilian defense were screened and there was music by Ray Scott and her orchestra, which was described as the only "civilian defense orchestra in the District." The girls acquitted them selves so nobly that Deputy Sullivan presented them with tickets for a moonlight cruise.

Commissioned Officers Invited to Dance

Commissioned officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps in this area are invited to a formal dance tonight at St. Patrick's Hall, 924 G Street Northwest, beginning at 9:30 p. m.

The Navy Band will furnish the music and 100 hostesses will be on hand for dancing partners. The dance is sponsored by the National Catholic Community Service Club.

Flag Presentation On Symphony Program

The National Symphony Orchestra will give a part of its opening sunset symphonies program June 14 to cooperate with the Office of Civilian Defense and Office of Facts and Figures in presentation of the flags of the 27 nations now fighting the Axis, J. P. Hayes, orchestra manager, said yesterday.

Maxwell Anderson, noted playwright, has written the script for the pageant, which will be directed by the screen star, Melvyn Douglas, and broadcast nationally. Twenty-seven members of the United States military services will participate in the program.

Kalorama Women to Give Bomb Demonstration

Twelve women from the Kalorama civilian defense area will go to the University of Maryland tonight to participate in an incendiary bomb demonstration at 8 o'clock. All have completed courses in bombs and gases.

They are Mrs. Charles A. Conrad, Mrs. Carlotta S. Trussell, Miss Virginia P. Cooke, Mrs. James E. Houghteling, jr., Mrs. H. S. Jones, Mrs. Erwin B. Summers, Mrs. M. E. Conrad, Miss Elsie H. Quimby, Miss Elizabeth Allen, Mrs. Frank A. Caprio, Miss Florence B. Casey and Miss Elizabeth Day.

A main purpose of the demonstration is to prove women can handle incendiaries as well as men. Col. Joseph Sears is director of the Chemical Warfare Division Training School which will sponsor the show.

A. W. V. S. Seeks More Canteen Volunteers

Mrs. W. W. Jervey, head of canteen service for the American Women's Voluntary Services in the District, yesterday issued a call for more volunters to assist at the open air canteen run for service men and war workers in the park at Constitution Avenue and Twenty-first Street Northwest.

The canteen opened June 1 and during its first day served lunch to 1800 persons. "Business" from the War and Navy Departments has increased rapidly and many more workers are needed for the mid-day hours, Mrs. Jervey said.

Broken Main Repaired, Water Service Restored

Water pressure was restored to the 18-inch main in George Washington Memorial Parkway, near Lee Boulevard, at 12:05 yesterday morning after being cut off by a break in the pipe Wednesday afternoon.

Repairs were made under the supervision of United States Army engineers in order to make available the water supply to Fort Myer, the National Airport, the Navy Building and the War Department Building, now under construction.

Scrap Salvage Drive Shows D.C.'s Mettle

America's much ridiculed flair for organizing causes was shown to have its practical value last night at a meeting of the D. C. Salvage Committe when statistics quoted revealed that 71,160,621 pounds of war materials had been collected here since last December.

Among other things, the organized salvage campaign was recorded as having rounded up 17,105,471 pounds of scrap iron and steel—enough to build several hundred medium tanks.

Other collection figures read at the second annual meeting of the salvage committe were: 836,634 pounds of scrap rubber—material for 90,000 truck tires; 46,324,007 pounds of waste paper, and 1,907,675 pounds of nonferrous metals.

Herbert L. Gutterson, chief, general salvage section, Bureau of Industrial Conservation, told members that 80 per cent of the paper used in war was salvaged waste paper, and that the 11,000 organized salvage groups in the country were contributing an appreciable part of that percentage now. He also said that the Government had found it more expedient to use the already established commercial groups for channelizing the reclaimed materials.

Robert Nathan, chief of the Planning Division of the War Production Board, revealed the critical necessity of salvaging when he said that because of ever increasing shortages the already delayed war production might have to go so far some day as to strip houses of nonessential metal decorations, as the Axis powers are doing now.

Willard Helburn, liaison officer of the rubber branch of WPB, also spoke.

The meeting was held at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Coroner's Jury Clears 2 Drivers In Death of Child

Two motorists were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after inquests into the traffic deaths Wednesday of Mary Ballard, Negro, 7, of 1840 Sixth Street Northwest, and Granville Tinker, Negro, 4400 Sheriff Road Southeast.

In each case the jury decided the deaths were accidental and freed Lorenzo Miller, Negro, 43 of 1458 Florida Avenue Northwest, in the Ballard death and Linwood Tyler, Negro, 35 of 42 Q Street Northeast, in the Tinker boy's death.

Mary Ballard was struck at Seventh and Florida Avenue Northwest Wednesday and died a few hours later at Freedmen's Hospital. Tinker rode his bicycle into the side of Tyler's machine Sunday and succumbed at Casualty Hospital.

'Wings Over Jordan' Choir Heard by 2000 at Ball Park

"Wings Over Jordan," the nationally known Negro radio choir, offered a program at Griffith Stadium last night to an audience of about 2000 persons. The program was sponsored by a joint citizens' committee, headed by Thurman L. Dodson, attorney, of 1833 S Street Northwest.

The choir was composed of 20 singers and was led by Gladys O. Jones, who also offered a solo selection. Other solos were sung by Paul Breckenridge and Olive Thompson. With the exception of "God Bless America," the concluding son, the balance of the program was devoted exclusively to Negro spirituals. "I Want Jesus to Walk With Me." "Rock My Soul in the Bosom of Abraham," "In the River of Jordan," and "I'm Troubled in Min,'" were outstanding in a repertoire of an even dozen spirituals.

During the five-minute intermission, Perry Howard, national committeeman from Mississippi, made an address.

Extolling the Negro's part in the conflict, Howard said the war was started without consulting the Negro but "they find that they can't finish it without us.

"We don't want the white people to win the war without us," he declaimed. "We don't want them even to think they can win it without us."

Dr. Glenn T. Settle, founder and president of the choir, was disappointed at the relatively small turnout. However, threatening weather was probably responsible for many thousands missing a well executed program.

Negroes Win Ration Board Posts

Presidential intervention has insured representation for minority groups, including Negroes, on the Office of Price Administration's 10,000 local war price and rationing boards, it was disclosed last night by Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Employes, claiming 20,000 Government-employe members, and director of the National Negro Council.

A resolution insisting on recognition of Negroes and other minority groups, as such, in the organization of the local boards was adopted at a mass meeting organized by the council on Sunday and sent to Mr. Roosevelt. Director Brown said last night he had received a reply from the President informing him that Price Administrator Leon Henderson was issuing a directive calling for recognition of the interests of such groups in selecting the members for the local boards.

As evidence of this clarification of policy, Director Brown cited appointment of Dr. Albert Hughes, Washington Negro, as a member of the District of Columbia War Price and Rationing Board.

Walker Bars Two More Magazines As Obscene

Postmaster General Walker yesterday struck at two more magazines in his campaign to rid the mails of obscene material.

Like one of those already cited, the magazines summoned to hearing yesterday were of the "true detective" story type. The Postmaster General quoted a long list of titles such as "I'm Sex Crazy," "Nude Body in the Pit," "Clew of His Hundred Nudes," and "1000 Revealing Photos."

The magazines cited yesterday were Front Page Detective and Headline Detective.

Beverly C. Snow Is Promoted To Full Colonel

Promotion of Assistant District Engineer Commissioner Beverly C. Snow to the rank of full colonel from lieutenant-colonel was announced yesterday at the District Building.

COL. SNOW

Colonel Snow, a native of Durham, N. C., came to Washington in 1940 and served for a time in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War as a student of the Army Industrial College, before his assignment to the District Government.

In addition to his other duties, he is also chairman of the District's public space, regulations, safety and civilian defense policy committees. After attending Trinity College, now known as Duke University, he entered West Point, and graduated in November 1918.

The Cum Laude Society elected the following members; Bryan M. Battey, jr., Doris J. Bruyninck, David R. Craig, Beatrice Dingwell and Seitwende Hermberg.

Awards also were presented to the staff of the "Quarterly."

Uncle Sam Gets 'Tainted Money' Of Peddler John

Uncle Sam had no compunction about accepting the so-called "tainted money" John Chowlis, 58-year-old Greek peddler, won on a numbers bet and took twice as much as John tried to give the Police Department.

At 9 a. m. yesterday Chowlis, who sells ice cream and candy, purchased bonds and stamps with part of the $135 he won Tuesday.

He bought a $100 and a $25 bond (maturity value) and $6.25 worth of stamps at the bond station at Eleventh and G Streets Northwest, "to help win the war."

Wednesday, John tried to buy a $50 bond at Police Headquarters but was refused because officials thought it might bring criticism upon the Police Department."

—With Shirley Povich

The easiest argument to promote in baseball is the Joe Gordon vs. Bobby Doerr affair which has cleft baseball opinion down the middle. The bold citizen who might suggest to a New England fan that the Yankees' Gordon is the greatest contemporary second baseman would be risking mayhem.

POVICH

Boston is proud of its Bobby Doerr, and the other day when Charley Gehringer of the Tigers said, in an interview that he rated Doerr a better ball player than Gordon, it was headline news in Boston, which for years had resented the tendency of the New York baseball press to proclaim Gordon in a class by himself.

Boston zealously went to bat for Doerr for the last three seasons, pointing somewhat derisively at Gordon's batting average which in no season has been as much as .300 while Doerr has been a consistent .300 hitter with the Red Sox. There was no concession by Boston fans, either, that Gordon has been a better fielding second baseman than Doerr.

This year, Boston folks are insisting that Doerr is the better fielder now in fact there has been a visible improvement in the Boston man's defensive play, although there never was any complaint about it. "You're seeing the real Doerr for the first time," wrote one Boston baseball man. "With Johnny Pesky at shortstop, Doerr is a better second baseman. He can play with more confidence now with Pesky instead of Joe Cronin alongside of him. Doerr always had to take into consideration Cronin's slowness in getting to the bag on double plays, but he can go all-out now with a shortstop like Pesky around."

Up in Boston the only concession they do make to Gordon is that he can get the ball away quicker than Doerr. They won't admit that the Yankee can cover more ground, and they do insist that Doerr is the steadier of the pair, which may be true.

They say in Boston that Gordon makes no play that Doerr cannot make, but that seems to be scarcely true to folks who have watched Gordon and his phenomenal acrobatics around second base. On the score of steady play, Boston may have something in Doerr's favor, but there is no contest for honors as a spectacular ball player. It was no surprise to learn, after Gordon's fancy tumbling acts began to be seen around the league, that he used to be an acrobat in college.

Bucky Harris, a pretty good second baseman himself in the twenties; so good in fact that he twice lifted the double-play record of the majors, inclines to Gordon as the better of the pair. "No reflection on Doerr, but Gordon makes plays that I've seen no other second baseman make. How he keeps his balance while making some of the plays he does, always amazes me. He gets a throw away from positions that look impossible."

Gordon has always had the advantage of a clever shortstop playing beside him, great fielders like Frankie Crosetti and Phil Rizzuto, in contrast to Doerr's Cronin, but that hasn't made a whole lot of difference, says Harris. "Gordon would be a standout second baseman in any kind of company," says the Washington manager. "He helps to make a shortstop look good."

If Charley Gehringer was, indeed, sincere about it when he told Boston newspapermen that he rated Doerr the better ball player, and was not merely tossing a sop to the home town folks, that too, is understandable. Doerr is somewhat in Gehringer's own image—clever but unspectacular. Where Gordon bounces after a ball, Doerr, like Gehringer, glides. Gordon makes a play look harder than does Doerr or as did Gehringer.

Gordon has played his best ball in the most important settings. His famous double-play throw in the All-Star game of two years ago saved Bob Feller from being batted out of the box, and saved the game for the American Leaguers. In the last World Series, he was simply the tough guy of the series, batting an even .500 to lead all the hitters. The Dodgers had rated him on his .276 average of the regular season, to their great dismay.

Doerr has not had the same chance to perform in All-Star or World Series company and thus his talents have not been projected into the full spotlight. However, he has consistently outhit Gordon where their careers have been paralleled and last year he batted in more runs than the Yankee. For those who are inclined to rate Gordon over Doerr, there is always the injunction of the league's pitchers who say, in spite some unanimity that "I'd rather pitch to Gordon than Doerr."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

The Boss Stays in Top Shape

Washington, June 4.—The word around the White House is that President Roosevelt is in great shape, holding up magnificently under the greatest strain ever heaped on one man in our time.

CONSIDINE

His Nibs has cut down on his visitors who have nothing to do with the war effort. This champion of labor, who has done more than any other President to improve the working conditions of the common man, works from early morning, when a few of his trusted advisers come into his bedroom for a mattress-side chat while he has breakfast in bed, until late at night.

There is no 40-hour week at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, and few are the callers to the President's office who speak of anything except the war effort. He's all out for victory.

There is a legend that some one went to Roosevelt not so long around and asked, in effect, "How can you stand up on this job? Aside from the physical strain you've got that awful mental handicap of knowing that even a little mistake can be costly beyond description. You've got the toughest job in the world."

The President is supposed to have smiled and said, also in effect, "Once upon a time I spent two solid years on my back, in bed. And every hour I was awake I devoted to the task of trying to move my toes. Every hour. At the end of two years I still couldn't move them . . . After that, no job seems very hard."

His Handshake Shows His Power

From the hips up, President Roosevelt is one of the best developed physical specimens we've ever seen for a better-than-middle-aged man. He has tremendous strength through his heavyweight arms, wrists and hands. More than one political enemy who has appeared in his handshaking lines, to slip His Nibs a hypocritical paw, can testify to his bone-crunching grip.

Despite the many new demands on his time, the President has been pretty faithful about keeping in trim. He still gets in many of his late afternoon swims in the private pool in the White House wing that connects the executive offices with the mansion proper. And he still gets his rub-down after the swim.

He's a strong swimmer, and strong for swimming. The exercise helped save his life 20 years ago, after the attack of infantile paralysis he suffered—a siege that was made doubly dangerous by the fact that for a number of days he was mistakenly treated for la grippe. It was Mrs. Roosevelt who called another doctor, which act led to the correct diagnosis of his illness.

The President can pound through the water of his little pool at a lively clip. The dunk seems to wash away the cares of the day and makes him fit for the tasks of the evening and the night to come. He uses a crawl stroke and enjoys every precious minute of the respite. Sometimes he goes to the shallower end, where the water is up around his shoulders, and walks slowly across the breadth of the pool.

After the swim, he goes to a little room just off the pool. It has a rubbing table, and the kind of ray lamp you see in big league baseball and football locker rooms. There he gets the kind of rub that would knock the average man cold. The strong fingers of the rubber dig deep into his muscles. He can stand a very rough rub, and usually gets it. He likes to smoke a cigarette during the rub, and chat about something besides the war.

—Then the Grind Starts Again

By the time he gets back to the mansion proper, the toil of the day has fallen off him. He's ready for a little work before dinner, ready to take his place as the laughing autocrat of his dinner table, and ready for the long evening of work. When the more intimate friends of the family are in for dinner, the President attends personally to the drinks before dinner. Usually one has his choice of a gin or a rum cocktail, though in wintertime the President sometimes serves a forthright old-fashioned to those of his more intimate guests who may imbibe. Lots of bitters, a lump of ice and a shot of old rye or bourbon. He concocts these with some flourish and those who have been lucky enough to dip their bugles into same attest to their wallop.

The lines around the President's eyes grow deeper, and the circles a little darker. But careful attention to the needs of his body has kept his aggressive good health, and good nature close to the 1933 high. As a young man he was a ball player, football player and tennis player. At Groton and Harvard he was an expert oarsman and horseman. As Assistant Secretary of the Navy, during the Wilson Administration, he was a lambasting golfer at the Chevy Chase Club, and known for his prodigious drives. It is patent that the muscles he developed in the course of playing these games would have deteriorated pathetically and he not had the resolution to pick of the thread of sports, after he survived the heavy blow of polio. His present psysical condition is the best proof of how shrewdly and faithfully he stuck by such athletic gifts as were left open to him.

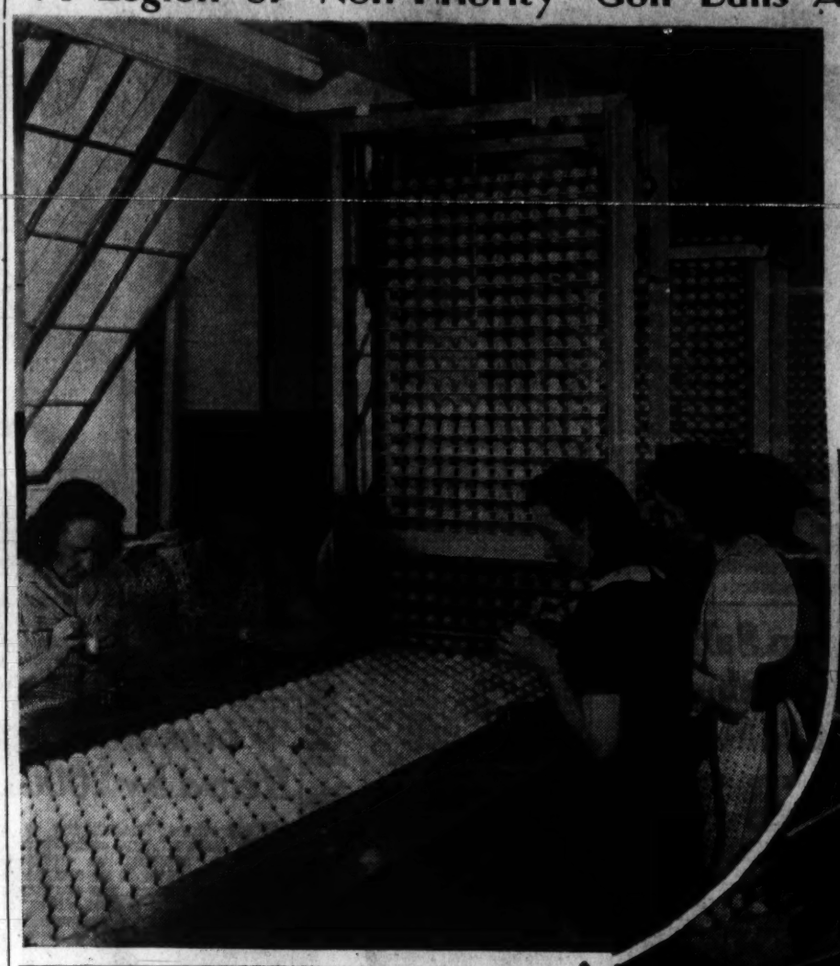
A Legion of 'Non-Priority' Golf Balls Are Rolling Toward the Links



Here's the before and after of those old cut-up balls you've turned into your pro for reconditioning. The Nation's golf professionals have sent the old pellets in bales to reconditioning factories, where new nonrubber, nonpriority covers are put on. The shiny new balls are then returned to the pros, stamped "reconditioned." Below—A girl expert in a U. S. Rubber Co. factory is sorting the balls just received. Hollingsworth Again Defeats Nats, 7 to 2

Browns Win After Game Is Called in 8th; Sundra Pounded Out; Carrasquel Relieves

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Al Hollingsworth, a graying left-hander prodded by the satisfaction of beating the club that once fired him, pitched the Browns to a 7-2 victory over the Nats yesterday. Released by the Nats after a week's trial in 1938, Hollingsworth now owns a private three-game winning streak over the Washington club this season.

The game was called off by the umpires with one out in the Browns' half of the ninth inning on account of a sudden change in weather conditions, perhaps saving the Nats further punishment. They were making little headway in their attempts to wipe out Hollingsworth's five-run lead.

Steve Sundra got an assist in the Browns' victory. He pitched a stream of base hits at the Browns in the fourth and fifth innings when they scored six of their seven runs. It was a sudden collapse by Sundra who for three innings didn't permit a man to reach first.

Hollingsworth allowed eight hits, but he restricted the Nats scoring to single runs in the fifth and sixth innings. He was serving up slow southpaw stuff for the most part, and walked only two batters.

Carrasquel Relieves

Alex Carrasquel tried to keep the Nats in the ball game after Sundra was swatted off the mound in the fifth inning. The tall Venezuelan brought the rally to a halt and pitched two-hit ball thereafter. The one run he did allow was undeserved. And Carrasquel himself slugged two of Washington's hits, including a seventh-inning two-bagger.

The Browns thrust off Sundra's mastery all of a sudden in the fourth inning to get the first two runs of the ball game. Don Gutteridge led off with a single to center and stole second, that latter feat becoming a useless gesture when Harland Clift hit the next pitch for an inside the park home run to the deepest centerfield corner.

They got rough with Sundra again in the fifth inning when the first three men to face him swatted out hits. Stephens lashed a single to left, Criscola, singled to right and Hayes banged a double to left that scored one run. Hollingsworth grounded out, causing no damage to the Nats, but Gutteridge's long fly to Case moved Criscola home from third. Clift walked, and McQuinn sliced a double to left that got the

Newsom Takes Mound Against Tigers Tonight

Buck Newsom and Tommy Bridges, teammates on the Detroit pitching staff last year, will face each other from the mound tonight at Griffith Stadium, where the Nats meet the Tigers under the lights. Play will start at 9 p. m.

It was on the Tigers' last appearance in Griffith Stadium that Newsom pitched his finest game of the season, holding his former pals to one hit and shutting them out.

Newsom will be out to bring to a halt his private five-game losing streak. Since his one-hitter against the Tigers, he has registered only one victory, and that in a relief-pitching stint.

2 Latins Leave Nats, Replaced By 2 Irishmen

New faces for the Nats' infield and the departure to the minors of two of the Washington Club's Latin Legion was announced yesterday by Owner Clark Griffith.

From the Washington-owned Chattanooga team, John L. Sullivan, a .350-hitting shortstop, and Ellis Cleary, a .250-second baseman, will join the Nats tomorrow, Griffith stated.

Parting company with the Nats were Outfielder Roberto Ortiz, giant Cuban rookie, and Joe Gomez, Mexican second baseman. Both players were hitting below .200.

Sullivan and Cleary will get jobs in the Washington infield immediately on reporting tomorrow, when they will play against the Tigers in a double-header, said Manager Bucky Harris. Thus Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl and Second Baseman Bob Repass will be benched at least temporarily.

Was Club's Star

Young Sullivan, a 22-year-old lad who hits right handed, has been the bright star of the Chattanooga club. "He is playing only his second year in organized ball," said Harris, "so I'm making allowances for his inexperience. But if he can hit, he'll help us. We're not risking much." Sullivan is no giant, standing 5 ft. 9 in. and weighing only 165 pounds.

Cleary has been in the Washington farm system for six years at Charlotte, Springfield and Chattanooga and never impressed Harris with his hitting ability, potential or otherwise. "But he is a cocky little fellow with a lot of dash and hustle, and that will help. He bunts well and is fast on the bases, and I've got to give him a chance."

Ortiz's departure from the Nats marks the third time he has failed in trials with the Washington club. Gomez, imported from Mexico to fill a second base emergency at the start of the season, fielded adequately enough, but did not hit. The Nats retain an option on both players.

Edgar Smith Beaten By Yanks for 9th Loss

New York Scores 8 Runs in Second Inning, Win 8-2; Borowy Gains Third Victory

By the Associated Press

Nw York, June 4.—Unlucky Edgar Smith, who has not been able to win a game all season, suffered his ninth setback today as the New York Yankees clustered eight runs in the second inning for an 8-to-2 triumph over the Chicago White Sox.

The chunky, blond southpaw had lost twice by 1-to-0 scores and a couple of other games by one run, but today he was really taken apart by the Yankees, who bunched six hits in their big spree.

The trouble started with walks to Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller followed by a double by Joe Gordon, scoring one run. Buddy Rosar was intentionally passed to load the bases and Phil Rizzuto singled for two tallies.

Pitcher Hank Borowy ,who achieved his third victory without a defeat, forced Rosar at third with a bunt and Frank Crossetti flied out, but this was just an intermission.

Buddy Hassett got a scratch single when Smith was slow covering the bag on a grounder to Joe Kuhel and Rizzuto scored on a bad throw to the plate by Smith. Borowy and Hassett moved to third and second on the play and both scored on a double by Tom Henrich. Then DiMaggio on his second time at bat bounced a double out of the playing field in left center and Keller singled, each hit adding a run.

Finally Lee Ross came to the mound and pitched two-hit no-run ball for the remainder of the game. The hits by Gordon and Hassett extended their hitting streaks to 20 and 15 games, respectively.

Borowy allowed eight hits, one less than the Yanks' totaled, but kept the Sox scoreless except for a run in the sixth and another in the ninth. It was the eighth defeat the Yanks have handed Chicago in eight games this year.

Surprise! Frick Calls Umps Stupid

By International News Service

St. Louis, June 4.—The action of National League umpires Tom Dunn, Bill Stewart and Ziggy Sears in calling last Sunday's Cubs-Cardinals game in Chicago without waiting the required 30 minutes, "was not only hasty, but was stupid," National League President Ford Frick said tonight.

Seventeen minutes after rain interfered with the second game of the doubleheader, the umpires called off the game. Subsequently it stopped raining, and Cubs General Manager Jim Gallagher, who protested bitterly to Frick, held the second game could have been prolonged if not finished.

Frick said he hadn't received the umpires' report, "but it had better be a good one, or I'll take something out of their checks."

Blustering Wins Lewes At Delaware

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., June 4.—The white and black silks of J. B. Belk, Virginia horseman, were borne to an upset victory here today when Blustering was first past the judges in the featured Lewes Purse at a mile and 70 yards.

Away alertly under Jockey Joe Dattilo, Blustering showed her heels to six good filly and mare rivals all along the route to notch a length and a half victory in the good time of 1:44 4-5 over a fast track. The straight payoff on the 4-year-old daughter of Sir Walter and Flaming Mamie was $18.20.

Chasing Blustering under the wire was W. L. Brann's Challomine which moved up to force the pace within a furlong, and was always within striking distance of the Belk filly, but her repeated challenges to get to the peacemaker proved unavailing. Gondalina, from the G. R. Watkins' stable, earned the show money, 2½ lengths in the wake of Challomine and three lengths to the fore of Celeano.

Louis Boxing Show Postponed 'Til Tonight

Brooklyn, June 4 (AP).—The boxing show scheduled tonight at Fort Hamilton, featuring an exhibition bout between Heavyweight Joe Louis and George Nicholson, his veteran sparring partner, was postponed until tomorrow night.

Services to Refuse Furloughs to Men Playing Baseball Commercially

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 4.—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, cracked down today on the commercial promotion of exhibition games that may interfere with the remaining series of major league contests devoted to Army and Navy relief.

In a strongly worded memorandum to major and minor league club presidents, Landis ordered them not to allow the use of their parks, players or facilities to promoters of games "allegedly played for relief, but actually as commercial enterprises." He also advised that Army and Navy authorities will refuse to grant furloughs to players now in the armed service to participate in games for commercial purposes.

Landis' memorandum, said in part:

"The activities of promoters of games allegedly played 'for relief' but actually as commercial enterprises mislead the public into the erroneous belief that such games are for the Army and Navy relief funds and thereby interfere with games actually played for these funds."

The commissioner made no specific reference to the so-called Dizzy Dean all-stars, who appeared against the famed Negro pitcher, "Satchel" Paige, and the Kansas City Monarchs at Wrigley Field, home of the Chicago Cubs, two weeks ago Sunday, drawing 29,775 fans and a $30,000 gate.

Three days later, on the same field the Cubs played the Cincinnati Reds in a bona fide relief game, drawing 9966 with receipts of $10,455.

The Dizzy Dean All-Stars also played a team which featured Paige at Washington last Sunday with 22,000 turning out to form the biggest crowd ever to watch a non-Major League game in Griffith Stadium.

Bob Feller, Cleveland's pitching ace, now in the Navy, had been advertised to appear with Dean in the Chicago game, but was refused permission by naval authorities. However, Abe Saperstein, one of the promoters, said he sent $1000 to Feller, regardless of his nonappearance, to fulfill a pledge he made to turn over his share to Navy Relief. Saperstein said the Chicago game was advertised as an exhibition and no relief pledges were made.

Stimson Says Louis' Fighting Up to Army

By the Associated Press

Secretary Stimson said yesterday that "no one outside of the War Department" is in a position to make any comments on requests that Joe Louis be permitted to fight for his own profit as world heavyweight champion.

Stimson told a press conference questioner he was not prepared to say whether Louis would be permitted to fight for other purposes than the Army's.

Mike Jacobs, who has promoted most of Louis' professional appearances, urged last week that the champion, now Corpl. Joe Louis Barrow, be permitted to make one more professional appearance in order to meet a June 15 income tax payment of $117,000.

Wilson, Swearingen Advance in Mid-Atlantic Golf Upsets

Rippy Meets Overton in Other Match

Favorites Beaten In Wholesale Lots In First 2 Rounds; Seniors in Finals

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The upper and lower brackets of the Middle Atlantic Amateur Golf Championship were slightly confusing after two rounds yesterday as a pair of long shots who didn't figure to last the first round and a pair of proven cofavorites entered today's semifinal rounds at Manor Country Club.

In the first match in the round of four this morning two clubs champions, Kenwood's Joe Wilson and Columbia's Ray Swearingen meet in a match which would have been a name-your-own-odds affair at the start of the first round. Following them will be Baltimore's Spencer Overton, a former titlist, and Claude Rippy, a former National public links titlist from Indian Spring.

Throughout a day of upsets, surprises and par and birdie golf Swearingen emerged as the man of the hour. The sometimes brilliant and always consistent stroker from Columbia startled the field with a 19-hole victory over Roger Peacock in the morning and came back in the afternoon to hand Kenwood's Bill Wenzel a sound 3 and 2 trouncing, leading all the way. He chopped a 15-footer for a birdie to beat Peacock, after leading 2 up and 3 to play.

Joe Wilson, respected by the Kenwood delegation which bowed to him in the club tourney last fall but little regarded by all others posted a pair of impressive triumphs. He caught comedalist Gene Pittman of Congressional on an off round and ousted him on the eighteenth in the morning and after lunch he caught Buddy Sharkey napping and after leading 4 up in the early going finally won, 2 and 1.

Downs Dick Melvin

Claude Rippy, the two-time Chevy Chase Invitation champion, showed Dick Melvin too many pars and an occasional birdie to win, 2 and 1, in the first round and then wasted a three-hole lead in the afternoon but still beat Baltimore's Eddie Johnston when the latter hooked out of bounds on the eighteenth and lost the hole and the match.

Overton, the 1940 titlist from Baltimore's Rolling Road Club has a reputation of driving the opposition mad with his steady, Ben Hogan-like down the middle brand of golf, and he did just that. Comedalist Volney Burnett counted his score at 72 in the first round and still lost, 2 up; while in the afternoon M. Parker Nolan watched his 2 up and 6 to play lead fade with the oncoming storm clouds, and Nolan shook hands on the seventeenth green after losing four of the next five holes, three of them to pars.

So today the semifinals find the comedalists Burnett and Pittman, the former champions Peacock and Harry Pitt, the highly regarded Nolan and the youth element, Sharkey and Johnston, missing from the all-important semifinals.

Play in Finals Today

Either Wilson, a 29-year-old Kenwood shotmaker who came here six years ago from the Midwest, or Swearingen, a semibald amateur from Columbia, who has been taking a determined shot at the local titles for several years, will be in the finals today.

On the other hand there will be Rippy, who plays in few tournaments but is always respected, against Overton, the bespectacled par-shooter from the Rolling Road Club in Baltimore who owns more sectional titles than the boys like to admit. He was a finalist last year, losing to Bobby Brownell, the nondefending champion from the host club.

The senior finals are also on tap today and it will be Frank G. Butler of Manor, against Walter R. Tuckerman, the Middle Atlantic amateur titlist in 1907. Butler had par for a 78, as he unexpectedly swamped Congressional's Jack McCarron, 6 and 4, while Tuckerman had a 8 as7 he defeated W. J. Peters of the host club, 1 up, dropping a 5-foot putt on the eighteenth after Peters sunk a 30-footer, forcing Tuckerman to sink his or play extra holes.

Fleming Stars As Cleveland Beats Red Sox

By International News Service

Boston, June 4.—Les Fleming, hard-hitting rookie first baseman, slammed a double with two out in the ninth inning today to give Cleveland a 4 to 2 victory over Boston and a sweep of the two-game series.

Lefty Oscar Judd held the Indians to three hits for eight frames, then lost control and walked Fabian Gaffke and Buster Mills. Fleming doubled them home and scored himself on Ray Mack's single.

Dom DiMaggio hit a home run for the Red Sox in the third, but Mills equalized the blow with a round-tripper in the seventh. Boston's other run came in the eighth when Lou Finney walked and tallied on Bobby Doerr's double.

Sea Bright Net Tourney Faces Cancellation

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., June 4.—The historic Sea Bright Invitation Tennis Tournament, America's oldest court classic, probably will be canceled because of war conditions, Holcombe Ward, president of the Sea Bright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club, said tonight.

At the same time, cancellation of the annual Spring Lake tourney, one of the major clay court invitations, was announced by Frederic L. Duggan, a member of the tournament committee. Both were scheduled for next month.

Plans for the Sea Bright tournament, renewed annually without interruption since its inception 54 years ago, were discussed by governors of the club, and "it appears very unlikely that the event will be held this year," Ward said. He added a decision would be reached at a meeting later this month.

The Sea Bright tourney, grass court prelude to the national championships, long has drawn the world's ranking players.

Ward, who also is president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, predicted that amateur tennis generally "will have a good year."

"Most of our ranking players either are in some branch of the service or slated to enter soon," he said, "but there is a promising young crop coming up, and I think they'll give the game new life and new blood."

Ott Breaks Runs-Batted-In Mark as Giants Win in 11th

Marshall's Homer Beats Cubs, 4 to 3; Melton Wins Seventh of Season as Pressnell Loses

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 4.—Willard Marshall's home run into the right field stands in the eleventh inning gave the New York Giants a 4-to-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs today.

The hectic blow ended a hectic contest which saw the debut of Jimmy Foxx as a Cub, a new record established by Manager Mel Ott of the Giants for runs batted in, and the third home run in three days by Rip Russell, Cub first baseman.

Foxx made his bow in the eighth as a pinch hitter and his best effort was a long fly to Ott. Russell's ninth-inning homer sent the game into extra innings.

In the third inning, Ott drove in the 1583d run of his career when he flied out to score Bill Werber from third. Ott's feat pushed him one run above Roger Hornsby's record of runs batted in.

Cliff Melton won his seventh game of the year and the loss was charged against Tot Pressnell, the third of three pitchers used by the Cubs.

Tigers Score Over A's, 8-7, In Wild Game

By International News Service

Philadelphia, June 4.—In a wild scramble of pitchers and pinch-hitters, the Detroit Tigers nosed out the Philadelphia Athletics today, 8 to 7, to win the odd game of the series.

The Tigers came from behind on three occasions to tie the score or go ahead and finally won the game in the ninth when they made four runs.

The first six Detroit tallies were the result of homers by York, Ross and Ned Harris. Harris' drive jammed under a pipe on top of the wall in right field and the Athletics argued unsuccessfully that it should be a ground rule double.

Ross' home run erased a 4-to-1 lead that Philadelphia had built up off Dizzy Trout, who made a balk to score one of the runs.

After Philadelphia scored twice in the home eighth to go ahead 6-4, Harris' homer again squared the match. Tebbets then singled two more tallies home to furnish the winning margin.

Jack Wallesa, Athletic shortstop who was hit on the head yesterday by Hal White, Detroit right-hander and sent to a local hospital, was discharged today and sent home. X-ray pictures showed no fracture.

Gopher Back Signs With Ram Eleven

Austin, Minn., June 4 (AP).—Warren Plunkett, University of Minnesota backfield star during the 1941 season, has signed a contract to play pro football with the Cleveland Rams this fall, it was disclosed here today.

He signed the contract after learning he apparently would not be eligible for another year of competition with the Gophers. His contract with the Rams reportedly calls for $4000.

He plans to leave for Cleveland August 10 and to enroll at Cleveland University to complete his studies for an ensignship in the Navy in which he has already enlisted.

Suffolk Track Automatically Scratches Nonmudders in 'Goo'

Stewards, Fans Happy Over New 'Wrinkle'; Idea First Proposed by Horsemen

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 4.—Some thoroughbreds just naturally can't run in mud and so Suffolk Downs stewards, with applause from the legion of two-buck bettors, have given racing a new wrinkle by ordering the automatic scratching of non-mudders whenever the going becomes heavy at the Boston race course.

The little man, whose deuces contribute to the handle just as much as the smart-money bettor, is one of the chief beneficiaries under this new practice, which is being tried for the first time on any American race track.

But the horsemen don't do badly either. Most equine ailments, and the majority of them occur in the pipestem underpinnings of the thoroughbred, can be traced to the animal's distinct dislike for muddy or heavy going.

Some nonmudders just flatten out and quit in the goo, but the majority of them give it the equine equivalent of the old college try and it is for these the tendons bow.

Agree on Idea

The stewards agree it's a good idea, too. They've been using the practice for less than two weeks, but in that time the way the favorites have been popping down has warmed the cockles of their hearts.

Naturally, they figure the best horse should win, nine times out of ten, all factors being equal. But you can't throw a nonmudder into heavy going and have him run like a 6-5 favorite should.

The small bettor may think he owes his thanks to the stewards for inaugurating this move. But it is to the horsemen quartered at the track that he owes most of his gratitude. It was their idea.

Already the stewards have a list of approximately 90 nonmudders among the more than 1000 steeds quartered at Suffolk Downs. Whenever overnight conditions cause a change in the track, these horses are scratched automatically in the morning. Should track conditions change during the day, the same automatic scratching rule applies.

Can Be Proposed

As other horses prove their inability to handle a muddy track during the meeting, their owners and trainers are privileged to propose them for membership in the Nonmudders' Automatic Scratching Society.

Apparently all hands agree this is a forward step in racing and, doubtless, it will be invoked also at the other New England tracks—Narragansett and Rockingham Park.

Butterman Captures Sixth Race at Charles Town Track

Feudel Net Is Second, Rom Third

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4.—Mrs. N. E. Stanton's Butterman turned in his second victory of the meeting in three tries, winning the sixth race and outstanding event on the Thursday program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. The 6-year-old son of Peter Hastings and Kitten M. forged to the wire 1½ lengths in advance of N. W. Pearsons' Feudal Net, an extreme outsider in the betting. A half length further back came J. Pedrosa's Rom to be third.

With Danny Scocca, his regular rider, in the hospital recuperating from injuries, the saddle assignment went to Jockey R. Scott and the veteran rode a faultless race. The crowd installed Butterman the favorite and he paid a $4.20 mutuel while going the 4½ furlongs in 0.53 over a slow track.

Butterman was off alertly but was given some stiff opposition by Phair Ydler and Calotte in the early running. The 6-year-old finally shook off those rivals and Scott pushed him on to hold Feudal Net safe in the closing drive. Rom, a newcomer here, came to the outside to gain contention and closed with good energy.

The daily double paid $58.60 and was started by a front running triumph of Mrs. H. Brown's Ready-About. With Jockey Albert Vessell in the saddle, Ready-About took command going to the first turn and there were no catchers in the field of eight. Ready-About won by four lengths with Chide second and Mintsika third. Jean C., one of the several winning favorites on the card, put the finishing touches on the "double." Jockey Buddy Root took the mare to the front at the first turn and, despite running out at the final bend, she stayed in the top end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JEAN C., $4.80, $3.40, $2.20; PART ONE, $4.40, $2.60; MAN AT ARMS, $2.80.

JEAN C. supplanted GRAND WALTZ as pacemaker early, drew out on backstretch, ran out entering stretch and came again when straightened. PART ONE was slow to begin and closed full of run. MAN AT ARMS was off poorly, was driven to reach contention and then weakened. CHANCE WATCH was well placed early and tired.

Daily Double, READY-ABOUT and JEAN C., Paid $58.60

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:07½. Off at 4:08. Winner, N. Corbin's blk. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RANDLE'S QUEEN, $8.80, $3.80, $2.60; BERWYN, $3.80, $2.40; RING UP, $2.80.

RANDLE'S QUEEN, first away, set strong pace and drew out after saving ground. BERWYN was forced out at first turn, moved to contention boldly entering backstretch and hung in final stages. RING UP was well placed early and weakened gradually. MISS DEFIANCE closed willingly from sluggish beginning.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:02½. Off at 5:03½. Winner, Mrs. N. E. Stanton's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUTTERMAN, $4.20, $3.00, $2.80; FEUDAL NET, $52.60, $16.80; ROM, $5.40.

BUTTERMAN was off alertly, raced PHAIR YDLER into defeat to take command and withstood long drive. FEUDAL NET was steadied when lacking racing room in early stages and came with good energy through stretch. ROM lost ground and closed full of run. CALOTTE raced in close quarters to stretch and then weakened. LIKLY LAD closed willingly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:29½. Off at 5:30. Winner, R. L. Pearson's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRADATIM, $18.00, $7.40, $4.20; PERSIAN QUEEN, $5.20, $3.60; GOV. SHOLTZ, $3.40.

GRADATIM went to front at once, drew out, was nicely rated and held away to end while tiring gradually. PERSIAN QUEEN was rated closest to winner and responded gamely when placed to drive to be closing on winner. GOV. SHOLTZ moved up menacingly and then hung. GOLD SWEEP was not a serious factor.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:56½. Off at 5:57. Winner, J. B. Key's b. m. Central Meets Wilson Nine in Second Game of Title Play-off

Vikings Can Clinch Flag By Victory

Today's Clash Set At Wilson Diamond; Wolfe and Saine Probable Pitchers

Central and Woodrow Wilson High baseball forces, after a day of rest, today tangle at the latter's field in what may prove the final game of the 1942 interhigh title playoff, and the outcome is now more in doubt than before the 3-game series started Wednesday.

Central, of course, has all the advantage after its 4-3 triumph in the opener. But it isn't cocky over that victory, coming as it did after 12 innings of nip and tuck struggling. It still has a big chore ahead if it expects to win the championship today and void the necessity of a third game Monday at Griffith Stadium.

With their star hurlers well worked out after Wednesday's work, Central will probably pull Harry Wolfe in from the outfield to pitch and Wilson will depend on Carl Saine. Even a fairly good day for both should bring about a duplicate of the first tight clash.

Wolfe has hurled in three games for the Vikings, handing out 9 hits in 16 2-3 innings. His record is one won and none lost, compared to Saine's one and one mark, achieved while pitching 28-hit ball for 22 2-3 innings.

Individuals Watched

No matter who wins, several players will be watched with more than a little interest today. Besides Wolfe, who is as good a hitter as has turned up here in some time, Central can lay claim to superiority over most local rivals at the catching and second base positions. Billy Carrier and Mike Denikos, respectively, hold down the posts.

At first base Wilson has the best performer in town. Dapper Donny Hillock, who sports probably the most ill-fitting uniform in the series, has made only two errors all season and slugs with the best of them. An indication of his hitting ability is contained in the fact he was intentionally passed Wednesday with men on second and third, but with two out in the ninth.

Also standing out for the Tigers is its second base combination of Billy Jawish and Freddy Vinson, a pair of converted basketball stars. Both augment their fielding prowess with high batting averages.

Hollingsworth Again Defeats Nats, 7 to 2

The Browns' seventh run was an eighth inning job after two were out. Judnich singled over second base and so did Laabs. When Stan Spence booted the ball around for an error, Judnich romped all the way home.

Score in Fifth

Hollingsworth moved through the first four innings pitching two-hit, scoreless ball, but the Nats caught up with him for a run in the fifth. Evans and Repass singled to left before anybody was out, and after Pofahl hit into a force play, Carrasquel got a run home with a single to center. Two men were abandoned on base by Case and Spence.

Mickey Vernon dropped a double inside the left field line with none out to put the Nats other run in motion in the sixth. Chartak struck out, Estalella scored Vernon with a double to center. Evans drew a walk and with one out the Nats threatened again, but Repass flied to left and Pofahl was a lusty strikeout victim.

The Nats got one hit thereafter—Carrasquel's two-bagger with none out in the seventh. The Nats got him all the way to second base.

Curran Names Aids For Griff Luncheon

Forty-six well known local sports followers were named on a tentative committee selected by Hon. Edward M. Curran, general chairman of the Washington (D. C.) Citizens Committee, to complete plans for the Clark C. Griffith Testimonial Luncheon scheduled for the Mayflower Hotel next Wednesday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock.

More names will be added over the weekend, and the first meeting of the official committee is scheduled for Curran's offices in the District Court Building, between Fourth and Fifth on D Street Northwest, at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Level Best Wins Top Flight 'Cap at Belmont

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., June 4.—Crispin Oglebay's Level Best a hard luck filly that always has been ranked as one of the best of her sex, easily added the Top Flight Handicap to her list of notable successes here this afternoon. She also enhanced the already impressive reputation of Equipoise as a sire in garnering the $5325 first money that went with this mile and a sixteenth stake for fillies and mares.

Marshall Field's Up the Hill came from far back to finish second, three lengths behind the winner and one length better than Vera S. Bragg's Transient.

Samuel D. Riddle, who, with Harrie Scott, bred Level Best and sold her to her present owner at the Saratoga yearling sales for $7600, was represented by the fourth horse in War Hazard. The latter was top-weight of today's feature field under 125 pounds, two more than Level Best carried.

Returns $7.80

Level Best was favorite at $7.80 for two and made the fast time of 1:42.8, three-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

This was Level Best's second 1942 start, she recently having been defeated after suffering serious interference. "Ekky's" most renowned daughter often has been forced out of training. On a couple of occasions her fractious post manners resulted in her having some teeth dislodged, but she looked as good today as when she won the Coaching Club Oaks a year back.

Soon after the start, Don Meade had the Oglebay chestnut in front. The filly that strides like a colt disposed of Rosetown after six furlongs then had plenty left with which to stave off Up the Hill and Transient. War Hazard, the Bateau Handicap heroine, could not better fourth place

Two Carroll Birds Win Pigeon Race

A pair of pigeons of the Lee Carroll loft captured first and second places in the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club's first 500-mile, non-stop flight from Nappanee, Ind. The first two birds were closely followed by an entry from the Warren Van Sciver loft.

The winners averaged approximately 38 miles an hour. Twenty-five local lofts were represented with 176 birds.

Snead at Home, To Play for U.S.O.

Hot Springs, Va., June 4 (AP).—Sammy Snead, the new P. G. A. champion who is visiting his home here for a few days before entering the Navy, will participate in an exhibition match Sunday as a part of the local U. S. O. drive.

The match will be played Sunday afternoon over the Cascades course. Other members of the foursome will be Welford Snead, Cascades pro and brother of Sam; Nelson Long, pro at the Homestead course here, and Fay Ingalls, president of the Hot Springs Golf and Tennis Club.

Navy Preflight School Plays Harvard, Rams

Chapel Hill, N. C., June 4 (AP).—A football schedule calling for games with Harvard and Fordham and tentative arrangements with five other teams is already shaping for the Naval preflight training center here at the University of North Carolina.

The center here, which ultimately will have 1875 trainees, will gather its flying and football talent principally from Eastern States.

Harvard will be met at Cambridge, Mass., September 26 and Fordham will be played at New York November 28.

Negotiations are now under way with North Carolina State College for a game at Raleigh in October, with William and Mary College at a site and date to be decided, and with the University of North Carolina team here.

Games also will be played against teams of the Southern Preflight School of Athens, Ga., and the Mid-Western School at Iowa City, Iowa.

"Sleepy Jim" Crowley, former Fordham coach who will serve here as head football coach, plans to begin football training about mid-August. Harvey Harman, the director of athletics who came down this month from Rutgers, hopes to carry the football schedule into the first or second week of December.

Athletic officials already are considering proposals to permit school ensigns to play on the teams. The list of ensigns already here includes Len Eshmont, former Fordham star; Jim Lalanne, former University of North Carolina quarterback, and Art Jones, former University of Richmond back.

Washington Gun Club Holds Shoot Tomorrow

The regular shoot of the Washington Gun Club will be staged tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. A 50-target event will open the meeting. Defense stamps will comprise the prizes. A 25-target event will also be held.

Warneke Hurls 6-to-2 Victory Over Braves

By International News Service

St. Louis, Mo., June 4.—Lon Warneke pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-to-2 victory over the Boston Braves today, giving the Redbirds the odd game of the three-game series.

A five-run outburst in the second inning against Willard Donovan, rookie southpaw, clinched the verdict for St. Louis. Five hits, including a triple by Walker Cooper and a double by George Kurowski, along with errors by Clyde Kluttz and Max West, helped the Cardinals to the big inning. Ten men went to bat during the round, with Errickson coming in to get Cooper, up for the second time, for the third out.

The Cards nicked Errickson for their final run in the third inning and Johnny Hutchings held them to three hits in the last five frames. Warneke gave up 10 hits in winning his fourth victory.

Wright's Pilot Given Suspension

By the Associated Press

New York, June 4.—Eddie Miller, manager of Chalky Wright, Los Angeles boxer who is recognized in New York State as the world featherweight champion, was suspended today by the State Athletic Commission for failure to appear at a commission meeting as he had been ordered.

The commission said Walker would remain suspended at least until a hearing is held June 23.

Aat the same time, the commission declared it would take no action on a June 19 title fight at Baltimore between Wright and Harry Jeffra, a former champion, since it did not recognize the bout as a championship affair.

Walker was ordered to appear before the commission to discuss a mixup in engagements which started several weeks ago when the New York group designated Sal Bartolo of Boston as the No. 1 challenger.

Plans for a title fight between Wright and Bartolo had to be postponed because of the latter's illness and Wright, meanwhile, fought a nontitle bout with Lulu Costantino, winning a close decision.

On May 12, the commission ordered Wright to defend his title against Costantino, but Walker accepted the Baltimore engagement for his boxer on the same day.

Walker contends that he agreed to the Jeffra bout before he received the commission's order, although both transactions occurred on the same day.

Men's District League to Hold Fete Tomorrow

Melissa Murphy, chairman of the banquet committee, advises that the Men's District League will hold its annual affair at the Hotel Hamilton tomorrow night starting at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Murphy, assisted by Harry Aiken and Dick Hobart, league secretary, have arranged a program of entertainment and other features for the members of metropolitan Washington's fastest duckpin league and their guests.

Team captains will advise at the ticket desk as they enter the banquet room which members of their team are eligible for one of the six tickets due each club. Additional tickets for guests may be bought at the same time at $2.25 each.

Dick Hobart, league secretary, asks that team captains phone him at RE-8195 as to how many members of each quintet, including guests, will be present so that seating arrangements may be made.

Yale Coach Commissioned

New Haven, Conn., June 4 (AP).—Ivan B. "Ivy" Williamson, an assistant football coach at Yale for several years, was commissioned a lieutenant (junior grade) in the Naval Reserve here today, and was ordered to report June 15 at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Alexandrians Play

The Departmental Baseball Team of Alexandria will aim for victories eight and nine Sunday when the Anacostia A. C. will be met in a doubleheader at Alexandria at 1:30 p. m. Brown and Arrington will take the mound for the Departmentals.

Face Service Elevens

Milwaukee, Wis. (INS).—Marquette University's football team already is scheduled to face two service elevens next fall—Great Lakes here, November 14, and Camp Grant here, November 22—and there is a strong possibility that another service aggregation will be added to the Golden Avalanche schedule.

Havens, Terror Coach, to Join Army Air Corps

By the Associated Press

Westminster, Md., June 4.—Charlie Havens, director of athletics and head football and baseball coach at Western Maryland College, will leave June 27 for duty with the Army Air Corps in the Air Intelligence School.

Havens, who will be inducted as a first lieutenant, because of a previous commission in the reserve officers' training corps and his work as a Maryland State Guard officer, will report at Harrisburg. He doesn't expect to stay there long, however.

Dr. Fred G. Holloway, Western Maryland president, said today no successor had been named. Havens is being given a leave of absence, and he is arranging the Terrors' future athletic program before he leaves.

All plans had been made for the 1942-1943 sports program, Dr. Holloway said.

Havens is president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association and helped develop the Mason-Dixon Conference, comprised of a dozen Maryland, District of Columbia, Delaware and Virginia colleges.

He was a football star at Western Maryland in the late 1920's, and was named all-Maryland center in 1928 and 1929. He captained the undefeated, untied 1929 team, coached by Dick Harlow.

When Harlow went to Harvard as head coach in 1934, Havens was appointed football coach and athletic director. He is finishing his seventh year in that capacity.

This spring he has been carrying on football practice alone, since Charles (Rip) Engle, his assistant and head basketball coach, resigned to become an aide of Neil Stahley, at Brown University.

Jenkins Punched At Home, Wife Says In Divorce Suit

Miami, Fla., June 4 (INS).—Lew Jenkins, the former world's lightweight boxing champion, didn't confine his punching to the ring, his wife charged in a divorce action on file tonight.

Mrs. Jenkins, in her action, stated she left Lew three months ago, "fearful for her life," after he had "beaten her up on several occasions."

The petition states he has "an ungovernable temper," and that last summer he broke down the door of their home in a fit of temper.

Mrs. Jenkins claimed that she is paying off the $6000 mortgage on their Palm Island Home, and asks that he be required to deed the property to her.

The couple were married at Durant, Okla., four years ago.

Top-Seeded Stars Capture Matches

Hartford, Conn., June 4 (AP).—Quarter-final action in the men's singles division of the thirty-ninth New England tennis championships was devoid of upsets today as top-seeded Gardner Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla.; Francisco Segura, Ecuador; Chauncey Steele, jr., Cambridge, Mass., and Harris Everett, Jacksonville, Fla., moved into the semifinal round. All won in straight sets.

Mulloy polished off John G. Gow, Simsbury veteran, 6—2, 9—7; Segura rallied to outlast steady Paul Guibord of Hartford, 6—2, 10—8; Steele easily turned back Arthur Prochaska, Presbyterian College, 6—3, 6—2, and Everett disposed of Marwin Anthony, West Palm Beach, Fla., 6—3, 8—6.

Top-seeded Hope Knowles of Avon and Katherine Hubbell of Dedham, Mass., gained the finals in the women's singles. Miss Knowles defeated Barbara Neilds of Cleveland, 6—2, 6—2, and Miss Hubbell eliminated Argyll Rice of Hartford, 6—2, 6—2.

Connie Mack Praises Castiglia, Wallaesa, Pair Set for Army

Team Already Hard Hit by Draft, to Lose Two of Youngest and Brightest Stars

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 4.—Connie Mack, already harder hit by the draft than any other manager in the major leagues, received the tough news today that he may lose his two rookie wonder boys.

Catcher Jim Castiglia and Shortstop Jack Wallaesa, greenhorns who became Athletics sensations overnight, both were hearing the call to arms. Manager Mack was frankly worried, but Patriot Mack was pleased.

"It will leave quite a hole in the team if they both join up," Connie said, smiling, "but it'll be hard on the enemy if they do as well in the Army as they did for me."

Castiglia, who hired out this spring as a menial batting practice catcher and wound up with a contract and a .357 batting average, disclosed last night he has made all arrangements to join the Army and expects to be inducted within a few days.

Wallaesa, who started out as the awkward laughing stock of the A's and then heard Mack call him "the shorstop of the American League," said today his draft board has called him for a new physical examination June 13.

The gangling, 6-foot-4½-inch Easton (Pa.) youth probably would have been in the service earlier except for an ear defect, which left him with a 4-F rating after a previous examination. This time, with physical requirements lowered, Mack thinks he has a 50-50 chance of passing.

Wallaesa was struck on the head by a pitched ball in yesterday's game with Detroit. Examinations showed today, Mack said, that he was not injured seriously.

Bolo Tie Easily Wins Lincoln Fields Purse

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Leading practically from the start, Hyman Friedberg's Bolo Tie easily won the 5-furlong juvenile race that topped Lincoln Fields' card today.

Bolo Tie beat the first-starting Town Victory by 3½ lengths. Brown Mate was third, a nose behind Town Victory. The winner returned $23.20, $9.80 and $6.00 and was timed in 1:02 2-5.

Banks, Brokers To Obtain War Risk Coverage

Washington banks, trust companies, brokerage houses, building and loan associations and other financial institutions will be able to obtain insurance coverage against loss or damage to valuable papers under the plans set up by the billion-dollar War Damage Corp., it was learned yesterday.

Although the War Damage Corp. policy excludes such risks from coverage, the scheme provides that by a special indorsement loss or damage to securities and other valuables can be insured. Rule 9 of the policy says:

"The policy will not cover, unless specifically provided in writing, accounts, bills, currency, deeds, evidences of debt, securities, money, bullion, stamps, furs, jewelry, precious and semiprecious stones, statuary, paintings, pictures, etchings, antiques, stamps and coin collections, dies, patterns, mechanical drawings, manuscripts, pleasure water craft, standing timber, growing crops or any real property which is not a part of the building or structure."

The rate schedule in coverage of such losses is somewhat different from the rates on real property, such as buildings. The ruling principle, insurance men point out, is that indemnity against loss of securities is provided to enable the bank, trust company or other financial institution to recover the securities.

In effect, indemnity is designed to pay the expenses of legal fees, advertisements and the obtaining of a duplicate certificate.

The rate on securities and other valuables is $1 for each $1000 of the amount of insurance indicated in the schedule of insurance shown on the application.

Nationwide Policing

OPA Plans to Check Retailers Next Week on Price Compliance

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, June 4.—The Office of Price Administration will inaugurate next week its first large-scale attempt to police retailers on their compliance with the general maximum price regulation, J. K. Galbraith, deputy administrator of the OPA announced here.

The attempt will be made through a Nation-wide check of retail stores, to spot violators of the order requiring the posting of ceiling prices on 200 cost-of-living items. Thousands of paid and volunteer inspectors will make the survey, which is expected to reach from one-fourth to one-third of the Nation's 1,900,000 retail outlets, he said.

The major object of the survey, however, will be educational, Mr. Galbraith asserted. Inspectors will call violations of the price-posting regulation to the attention of store owners or managers and instruct them on the proper display of ceiling prices, but no attempt will be made during this check to prosecute retailers for noncompliance, he said.

Educational Drive

"Our intention in undertaking this program is to make sure that every retailer is fully acquainted with the requirements of the regulation," he added. "The chief problem at present is to make certain that every retailer knows just what he is supposed to do.

"The OPA has found that when merchants fully understand the requirements they are generally willing and anxious to comply fully. However, there have been numerous instances in which, because of ignorance or uncertainty, smaller merchants in particular have failed to carry out the regulation."

Asked whether the "warning" nature of the survey meant that the OPA was going to allow every retailer one violation of the price-posting regulation, just as every dog is entitled to one bite, Mr. Galbraith first shook his head and then answered with a smile: "You have the general idea."

Time Limits Not Yet Set

Although no time limit has been set for the survey, a definite date on which the check-up will end will be announced later, Mr. Galbraith said. Retailers found violating the price-posting regulation after that date presumably will be prosecuted.

The survey will be conducted under the supervision of the eight regional offices of the OPA. Mr. Galbraith and Merle Fainsod, director of the Retail Trade and Service Division of the OPA, outlined the purposes and procedures for the program to the regional price executives and members of their staffs this week at a meeting at the Hotel Stevens.

Each regional price executive will organize in the States in his region staffs of inspectors made up of regular OPA employes and volunteers from local war prices and rationing boards. These inspectors will make the "door-to-door" check of stores, explaining the posting requirements in detail and answering any questions for the merchants.

The survey will cover first the cities where there are OPA State offices and thereafter four to six other cities in each region. As rapidly as possible the program will be extended to other cities and then to smaller communities.

8000 Inspectors

Mr. Galbraith said that the OPA would use from 8000 to 10,000 paid employes as inspectors and clerks for the survey. He emphasized that "no Gestapo of volunteer housewives" would be utilized for the program, but said that the Nation's 9000 local price and rationing boards might be called upon for some help.

Under the maximum price regulation, all retail stores were required to post ceiling prices on the 200 cost-of-living items by May 18. These prices were to be displayed so that they would be clearly visible at the point of sale. Some stores, however, listed their prices in books, and these were granted an extension until today to change to the open-posting system.

All retailers will be required by July 1 to file their ceiling prices on the cost-of-living items with the nearest prices and rationing board. They must also prepare by that date lists of ceiling prices covering all other items they sell, but these need neither be posted nor filed with the rationing boards.

Survey to Start Here on Monday

The OPA for Region No. 2, which includes the District of Columbia, said yesterday that beginning Monday a series of "flying squadrons surveys" would be made to check independent retail stores on price compliance. Chain stores, it was said, would not be included in the surveys because they are being checked through their headquarters' offices.

Middle West Corp. 'Breakup' Affirmed

Philadelphia, June 4 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission today directed the termination of either the Central and Southwest Utilities Co. or the American Public Service Co. as holding companies within the Middle West Corp. system and that either of the two firms reduce their stock to a single class of common shares.

Holding that the continued existence of both subsidiaries unduly complicates the system's corporate structure, the SEC turned down the plan proposed by the companies for a statutory consolidation of Central and American and the formation of a new company which would issue single classes of new preferred and common stocks.

At the same time, the commission denied a motion by the companies that proceedings under the holding company act be suspended for the duration of the war and that unless the motion was granted that the SEC reopen hearings.

Great Britain—Official (bankers foreign exchange committee rates), buying, $4.03; selling, $4.04, open market; cables, $4.04.

Rates in spot cables unless otherwise indicated.

New York Cotton

New York, June 4 (AP).—Cotton futures advanced 70 cents a bale today in ending declines recorded in the past five successive sessions.

Announcement that the Commodity Credit Corp. would not offer any cotton in June under the general sales program helped bolster prices but traders said sentiment also was influenced by anticipation of a technical recovery.

Retailers Form Inventory Unit

New York, June 4 (AP).—A committee composed of representatives of nearly 20 national retail trade organizations has been set up to compile retailers' views on proposed War Production Board inventory control and submit recommendations and comments to the Government agency, it was announced today.

Formation of the committee was the outgrowth of a joint meeting of the American Retail Federation and the National Retail Dry Goods Association. The first meeting of the committee will be in New York next Tuesday.

Dr. David R. Craig, president of the federation, said the need for inventory control had not been definitely established and that a representative from the WPB would be invited to attend the first meeting of the committee to explain the Government's case.

Canada on 'Pay as You Go' War Basis, Bankers Told

Seigniory Club, Quebec, June 4 (Canadian Press).—Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, told the annual meeting of the United States Bankers Association for foreign trade today that Canada had decided upon a policy of "pay as you go" in conducting the war with consequent high taxes and internal borrowings, and foreign exchange control regulations.

Speaking to the bankers at their first meeting in Canada, Towers said that it had been necessary to make sure "that no lack of Canadian dollars kept the United Kingdom from buying all the things they needed to obtain in Canada."

This was done, he said, by partial payments in gold early in the war, then by the Canadian government and the Canadian National Railways prepaying bonded debt held in the United Kingdom, and then by an interest-free loan of 700 million dollars to the United Kingdom.

Harry Salinger, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, told the association that daily business activities must not take precedence over those directed toward helping "our respective governments in every way possible to prosecute this war successfully."

In his presidential address Salinger said "bankers must not hold back, otherwise they will become a drag and deterrent in a most vital issue."

Those engaged in international trade or the financing of such trade, have suffered greatly in the loss of business activity, he said, and are further harassed by the difficulties of carrying out such business as is possible.

Salinger said post-war needs would be successfully met if bankers were ready to transfer their war zeal and ability in the direction of developing methods and procedure to make possible the movements of goods and monies.

"Much time will be required for the conversion from a war to a civilian economy," he said.

"We should, therefore, avoid in so far as possible, the liquidation or organizational ability and capital resources, for they will be in great demand in the post-war period."

Reserve Banks' Bond Buying Up 43 Million

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that the 12 reserve banks increased their investments in Government securities by 43 million dollars last week.

Following similar purchases for several weeks the banks increased their holding of Treasury bills by 38 million dollars and certificates by five million dollars. Twelve banks owned $2,525,000,000 of Government obligations.

Lendable excess reserves of banks increased 240 million dollars to a total of $2,780,000,000.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended June 3 member bank reserve balances increased 186 million dollars. Additions to member bank reserves arose from increases of 139 million dollars in reserve bank credit, three million dollars in gold stock, and four million dollars in Treasury currency, and decreases of 129 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks, nine million dollars in Treasury cash, and 72 million dollars in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, offset in part by an increase of 170 million dollars in money in circulation. Excess reserves of member banks on June 3 were estimated to be approximately $2,780,000,000, an increase of 240 million dollars for the week.

The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was an increase of 43 million dollars in United States Government securities, bills increased 38 million dollars and certificates five million dollars."

Wholesale Prices At 15-Year Peak

By the Associated Press

The Labor Department wholesale price index advanced 0.1 per cent in the last week of May to 98.8 per cent of the 1926 average, the highest point in more than 15 years.

Continued advances in prices for agricultural products, particularly livestock, accounted for the advance. In the past 12 months the index has risen 16 per cent.

Except for an advance of more than 1 per cent for farm products, there was little change in commodity prices in primary markets. The advance in prices for livestock brought the farm products group index to the highest point since September, 1929.

Holiday Reduces Week's Clearings

New York, June 4 (AP).—Bank clearings in the holiday week ended June 3 dropped 6.2 per cent under the preceding week and 6.8 per cent below the similar holiday period last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

A sharp contraction of volume at New York accounted chiefly for the decline. New York's turnover was $3,509,569,000, down 16.7 per cent from a year ago. Boston and Dallas also reported smaller volume than for the 1941 week.

Total for 23 leading cities, including the New York figures, was $6,292,172,000, against $6,748,927,000 in the 1941 week.

Lionel Corp. Net Rises; Starts on War Products

New York, June 4 (AP).—Lionel Corp. Reported today its profit for the fiscal year ended February 28 was $579,783 after charges and taxes, equivalent to $3.22 a share. This compared with $381,085, or $2.12 a share, in the preceding year.

The report disclosed that the company, a manufacturer of miniature electric trains, since 1940 has been gradually converting its manufacturing facilities to war production. The company's regular products will be available in 1942, it was added, although not in as great quantity.

Montgomery Ward Sales Shrink 16%

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co., mail order and retail merchandising firm, today reported May sales of $50,761,616, a decline of 16.1 per cent from sales of $60,519,761 in May, 1941. Sales for the first four months of the company's fiscal year totaled $202,191,243, up 2.7 per cent over $196,913,097 in the like 1941 months.

Wolverine Tube Sold

Industrial Stocks Continue Brisk Upswing; More Aerial Blasts at Nazis Cheer Traders

New York, June 4.—Persistent aerial blasts at Germany more than offset the Japanese bombing of Dutch Harbor as a market factor today and leading industrial stocks extended Wednesday's last-minute runup by fractions to around 3 points.

Motors led the early upswing on good volume. Specialties, mail orders and farm implements then joined the procession. There was occasional profit selling, however, and final prices were under the best in many cases. Rails, steels, oils, coppers and aircrafts failed to do much although the last-named displayed belated resistance.

There were a number of new year's highs posted during the day. Among these were General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, United States Rubber, Pepsi-Cola, American Can, Montgomery Ward and Pan American Airways. United Aircraft slipped to a new 1942 low but attracted bids in the concluding quarter hour and finished with a net gain of 1⅛.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held an upturn of .4 of a point at 35.4, duplicating yesterday's recovery. Transfers of 524,300 shares compared with 334,020 the day before and were the largest since May 21.

Du Pont moved up 2¼ in the face of a Federal grand jury's indictment of this company, together with other explosive manufacturing concerns on charges of violating the anti-trust laws.

Prominent on the day's bulge were Allied Chemical, up 3¼; Dow Chemical, up 3; Union Carbide, up 2¼ and Philip Morris, up 2.

Lesser plus marks were held by United States Steel, American Telephone, Santa Fe, American Tobacco "B", Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, International Harvester, Johns-Manville, J. C. Penny and Consolidated Edison.

On the offside were N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Great Northern, Western Union, Goodrich, Anaconda and International Nickel.

Motors were aided by reports armament output of automotive manufacturers currently was 10 to 20 per cent above previous expectations. A little short covering helped aircrafts at the tail-end of the proceedings.

Spurring sentiment also was another brisk rally in commodities. At Chicago wheat and corn each jumped 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents a bushel and hogs were 10 cents higher. Cotton, up $1.10 at one period, ended 70 cents in front. Bonds generally advanced.

Forward Curb tilters were Humble Oil, Creole Petroleum, American Gas, American Cyanamid, Northern States Power "A", Singer Mfg. and Sherwin-Williams. Turnover here aggregated 64,060 shares versus 46,015 in the preceding session.

Net After Taxes Of 270 Firms Off 25% in Period

New York, June 4 (AP).—The National Industrial Conference Board, research organization, today reported in a survey that a substantial year-to-year gain in the income of industrial corporations before Federal income taxes and contingency reserves in the March quarters was converted by increased Federal income taxes into an equally large decline in net after taxes.

The conference board's analysis of income statements of 270 corporations disclosed that net income after taxes in the first three months of this year was 25 per cent below the corresponding 1941 quarter. Earnings before taxes showed an increase of 29 per cent.

"Comparison with figures for 1940 is even more striking in some respects," said the survey.

Reclaiming Plant Declares Britons Scrap Good Tires

Buffalo, N. Y., June 4 (AP).—Sixteen freight car loads of scrap rubber from Britain—640,000 pounds—have arrived at the United States Rubber Reclaiming Co. plant for processing into reclaimed rubber for use by war industries.

"Judging by the scrap quality," General Manager John S. Plumb said, "the British evidently have given up trying to drive their cars and are scrapping good tires. This is just the opposite of conditions here where motorists are trying to get the last mile out of old tires and dealers are selling junk tires to motorists in an effort to get a few extra miles."

Plumb asserted the rubber was shipped under lend-lease in exchange for a shipment of reclaimed rubber to Britain some months ago.

"Wilbur's morale has been high right from the start—never once have I heard him plan anything but offensive operations!"

with Glynn

A mere slip of a girl, who's been a pretty well known actress merely since 1918, makes her debut over WJSV and the Columbia network tonight in the dramatic series known as "Dear John."

Her name is Irene Rich. While it may seem like only yesterday to some of you, it was really in 1918 that Miss Rich was cast with a gentleman, name of Dustin Farnum, the leading cinema idol of the time, in a series of pictures, whose names offhand I don't recall for some reason, but which, I am assured, were very successful in their day.

Miss Rich's tenure in Hollywood has been going on ever since then, which means that it's been about as long and successful as they come. She owns a farm (Sorry, I should say ranch!) in the San Fernando Valley out there and is something of a landed proprietress in that she raises cattle, sheep, pigs, ducks, geese and heaven knows what else, including alfalfa, beans and bees.

Miss Rich started her radio career in 1933 and has been heard, in one thing and another, on the air every week since—well—then, she has missed two broadcasts, it seems, both when she was grounded by bad weather.

"Dear John" is produced in Hollywood under the direction of Gordon Hughes, who has been directing major network shows for the past half dozen years. Among the leading players heard with Miss Rich in it are Lois Collier, Tom Collins and Gerry Mohr.

Contract Bridge

"In a bridge game tonight my partner made a preemptive bid of three hearts, vulnerable," writes Mrs. J. P. in submitting a slam that was not reached. "I held these cards:

♠A 7 3
♡A K
♣Q J 6

"I bid four diamonds; partner passed. What should I have bid? Should partner have passed my four-diamond bid even if incorrect?

"I hold that my bid showed strength and he should have strung along. He holds that I should have bid six hearts. I thought we might get to seven by naming suits.

A three bid, even when vulnerable, is a defensive bid, and a partner having as rich a hand as Mrs. J. P. can take no chances on a three-bidder's "stringing along." Even with a partner in whom you have perfect confidence, a jump to four no trump is about the only bid he would respect sufficiently to continue.

In response to the four no-trump call, he would show the ace of clubs if he holds it, without which information the grand slam cannot be attempted. It is too long a chance to take to trust that the heart bidder has a club void. Probably bidding six hearts at once is the wisest course, and certainly it is the safest.

New Setup To Aid Farming In Hemisphere

The Pan American Union's governing board yesterday approved organization of an Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences—a Continental research and experimental station to coordinate agricultural science in the hemisphere republics.

The principal office will be in Washington. Other American countries will have supplementary offices and the governing board of the Pan American Union will serve as the Institute's governing unit, it was announced.

The Institute's oojective "is to encourage and advance general agricultural education and training in the Americas."

"It is expected that the Institute will set up experimental stations, farms, ranches, laboratories and educational centers in many or all of the American republics to carry out educational programs which have already been proved feasible and also to test new proposals.

A half million dollars has been made available to cover initial expenses such as construction of buildings and early operation costs but location of the building has not been decided upon.

Secretary Hull, as chairman of the governing board, paid tribute to Dr. Caracciolo Parra-Perez, Foreign Minister of Venezuela, who arrived here Wednesday for official conferences.

The secretary referred to Dr. Parra-Perez as an old friend and remarked on his "unswerving devotion to the highest standards of international conduct as well as to the principles of Pan American unity." He extolled Venezuela for having acted almost immediately after "that cowardly attack on Pearl Harbor" in its declaration of complete solidarity with the republics of America. Replying, Dr. Parra-Perez said "the victory is certain."

3 G. W. U. Faculty Members To Join U. S. Armed Forces

DEAN BRIGGS DR. LATIMER PROF. BENNETT

Three members of the faculty of the George Washington University have been granted military leave to accept commissions in America's armed forces, it was announced yesterday.

They are: William Paul Briggs, dean of the university school of pharmacy, who has been commissioned lieutenant, senior grade, in the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy; Dr. John Francis Latimer, associate professor of classical languages, who has been commissioned lieutenant in the Navy, and Winfield DeWitt Bennett, assistant professor of public speaking, who holds a commission as first lieutenant in the Army Air Force Intelligence.

A resolution unanimously adopted at the joint session of the Junior and Columbian College faculties last week paid tribute to these three and five others who have left within the past year, declaring that "We, their colleagues, express our commendation of their course and wish them Godspeed, knowing how well they will represent our profession and our university."

Dean Briggs has been a member of the university's school of pharmacy since 1927, when he was appointed instructor. He was made assistant dean in 1930 and dean in 1931. He was appointed professor of pharmacy also in 1933. A graduate of the university, he has been largely responsible for the growth of the university's school of pharmacy. He is treasurer of the United States Pharmacopoeia for the decade 1940-50, and is chairman of the local committees of pharmacy and civilian defense and pharmacy and selective service.

Dr. Latimer has taught classical languages at the University since 1937, when he was appointed assistant professor of classical languages. A graduate of Mississippi College in 1922, he received his master of arts degree at the University of Chicago in 1926, and his doctor of philosophy at Yale University in 1929. He is president of the Washington Classical Club.

Prof. Bennett was appointed instructor in public speaking at the university in 1937. In addition to his present duties as assistant professor of public speaking, he has directed intercollegiate and intramural debates at the university and has acted as chapter adviser to Delta Sigma Rho, debate fraternity. He has received both his A. B. and M. A. degrees at the university and this week was awarded his bachelor of laws degree from the university law school.

Brief News Flashes Off The Wires

A star fell from the sky over Dayton, Ohio. It belonged to Brig. Gen. James Doolittle, who was testing a new plane when a parachute strap caught on one of the silver stars designating his rank and tore it from his left shoulder. It went twinkling down into the streets of Dayton.

New York has decided to outlaw sneezing. Mayor LaGuardia signed a bill introduced by hay-fever sufferer Councilman Kinsley, compelling elimination of noxious weeds from vacant lots.

Film Actress Patsy Kelly didn't get married in Salt Lake City because the Army ordered Sergt. Otto Malde to report at once to an officers' training schoo. in the East. Miss Kelly flew to Salt Lake and flew back—kissed her sergeant, but didn't have time to marry him—was reminded that this is war.

In New York Jose Iturbi signed up as a civilian air patrol pilot, revealing he has had 860 hours of flying time. When not at the controls of a plane he will continue to give piano recitals and conduct concerts, which he also does rather well.

Judge Joseph R. McCarthy, 32, youngest circuit court jurist in Wisconsin, left his $8000-a-year job in Antigo, Wis., to join the Marines. Other judges will share his work and he won't be replaced during his absence.

86 More District Selectees To Report at Fort Myer Today

Eighty-six men from five local draft boards report to Fort Myer, Va., this morning for final physical examinations prior to induction into the Army.

Among those who reported yesterday was Bernard A. Nalley, jr., 21, of 4208 Tenth Street Northeast who was the first District man to be drafted under the third registration, for men 20 to 44, held February 16.

Other men of the same group have entered the Army as volunteers, but Nalley is the first to go in regular draft order. He was among 12 men inducted yesterday from Draft Board 20.

A resident of Washington since birth, Nalley was an employe of Woodward & Lothrop until a few days ago.

Men from Boards 5, 9 and 15-A report to Fort Myer at 8 a. m., and those from Boards 6 and 7 report at 8:45. They are:

Scuffle Led to Shots, Says Oden

Guy E. Oden, on trial for his life in District Court, testified yesterday that the shots that killed his 15-year-old girl friend in the kitchen of 114 O Street Southwest were fired during a scuffle with a neighbor over the gun.

Under questioning for several hours by his attorney, Owen said he did not remember what happened after the victim, Ellen Reed Cannon, cried: "Don't let her get the gun, Guy," as Mrs. Elizabeth DeVous came toward him brandishing a kitchen utensil.

Mrs. DeVous, the former theater usher testified, entered the kitchen and, finding the couple embraced, told Oden to "get out of here," adding that he had "caused Ellen enough trouble." The gun, according to Oden's testimony, was lying nearby.

Asked what he did when the shooting was over, the defendant said:

"I don't know. I just run, I guess."

Testimony by the 20-year-old defendant, who won a new trial last October, will continue today.

Hartley Bill Would Ban Sale of Rockfish Here

Representative Fred Hartley (Republican) of New Jersey yesterday introduced in the House a bill to prohibit the sale in the District of striped bass measuring less than 16 inches. The fish are commonly known here as rockfish.
